Will Sits Up, Dictates

Beverly Hills Executive Only Knows What He Gets in Mail; Has Friends Help Him Out with Weekly Morsel for Readers' Consumption

BY WILL ROGERS

California Hospital, Los Angeles, July 2—All I know is what I gets in the mail and by telegraph, but all I know when I get out of here will be a whole lot more than I knew when I came in. I'm not hardly in shape yet to give you the low down on this "COAX 'EM IN AND CARRY 'EM OUT FOUNDRY," but I'm learning every day.

I hope my constant reader and the two or three "in and outers" won't mind me accepting a little help this week. Here is an old boy that sent a poem that seems to about have the low down on me:

William had a bum appendex
And, of course, there came a date
When the Doctor gravely told him
That he'd have to operate.

So the Hospital embraced him,
And the deed was neetly done,
But instead of being over
All his troubles had begun.

For he found he ran a gas works
And from morn 'till dewy eve
He was busy generating
Gas that nothing would relieve.

With the rumble and the thunder
Of a detonating bomb
Romped the wicked little bubbles
In his suffering abdomen.

Every touch on his incision
Made him wince and moan with pain
But the bubbles gaily gathered
And rolled up on it again.

Thru the night the plant kept working
And the pain was never gone—
Every vicious gas pain shouting
To his comrade, "Hurry on."

Long he stood the fiendish torture
'Till the flesh could bear no more.
Then the undertaker got him,
And the gas bombs roared no more.

On his tombstone is this message
All may read who thither pass:
"Here lies rumbling William Rogers Blown to atoms by his gas."

—Gene Bernard

DEAR WILL:

A rolling gall stone gathers No Gas. When a man has Heart, Brains and Guts like you have he doesn't need Gall.

Dear Bill:

It is a shame you have to have such a Tummyache but when the ache is all over you will be better than ever. I've just been through it so I know. God bless you old friend.

Dear Will:

One stone put Goliath out of business. But I am sure the armor of countless good wishes you wear will protect you against a thousand.

Herbert Bayard Swope,

Dear Will:

All I know is what I read in the papers and I see that your Gall isn't what it used to be. Hope you won't be disappointed in the scar and that they didn't take any of the funny part out of you.

E. C. Romfh, Mayor,

Dear Bill:

We are doubly sorry you are ill Will, we came all the way from Chicago to be married by the Mayor of Beverly Hills and had to get hitched today by the Justice of the Peace at Santa Ana.

Mr. and Mrs. Ashton Stevens,

Dear Rogers:

Congratulations on your publicity and recovery. Hope loss of stone weight is not overbalanced by loss to your exchequer.

Kirk Johnson,
Santa Barbara, Calif.

Dear Bill:

What is the big idea? You ought not to have any of that particular equality removed, because you are going to need it all. However, a man's gall ought to be undiluted s ogo ahead and take out anything that is not genuine. Have been anxious about you because I think our stunts last Saturday did not help you any. Know you will be all right but want you to hurry up and get well. We got home in good shape this morning, again thanks and best wishes.

Dear Will:

Dear Will:

Dear Bill:

Next time you have Gall stones put them in your wife's name so they can't take them away from you. Now that you are Hog Tied and branded you can imagine how it feels to be a Short horn. Did the doctor have to flank you to get his brand on you, and how long did it take? We are anxious to see the design of the brand. Would advise you putting the Gall stones in Vaudeville. Take care of yourself, Bronco.

Official Numbers of Five Main Roads Through Here AreChanged,Announcement

Force of Men Under Division Engineer Grover C. Snyder Begin Placing New Markers on Route Affected by General Revision

Official numbers of five main highways running through Marion county are changed in connection with a general revision of the federal and state highway marking system throughout the state.

As a result of adoption of the system new markers will be placed along all of the re numbered routes, the yellow plates formerly in use, being replaced by white shields lettered in black.

A force of men under Division Engineer Grover C. Snyder of the state highway department has started work installing the new markers. The changes are scheduled for completion in this district as well as in all other parts of Ohio by July 9.

List of Changes

Marion County numeral changes on federal and state routes are as follows:

Upper Sandusky and Marion-rd from No. 22 to U. S. route No. 23; Marion and Delaware-rd from No. 4 to U. S. route No. 23; Kenton, Marion and Galion-rd from No. 10 to U. S. route No. 30; Marion and Marysville-rd from No. 38 to state route No. 4; Marion and Mt. Gilead-rd from No. 42 to state route No. 95.

New official state highway maps showing all the changes in route numbers are now available. Division Engineer Snyder stated today that he has a supply on hand at his office, room No. 19, Barnhart building, for local distribution. The maps may also be obtained by writing G. F. Schlesinger, director of highways and public works, Columbus, and enclosing a two-cent stamp to cover mailing cost.

Changing of the route marking system in Ohio and all other states is the result of action recently taken by the joint board of interstate highways composed of federal and state highway officials. This board was appointed by the secretary of agriculture at the request of the American Association of State Highway Officials. The system has been approved by all the state and work of changing the markings is now under way.

The United States Highway system embraces the main transcontinental or interstate highways of the country. Each United States highway has been given a number by which it will be marked and each route will have the same number throughout its entire length.

Federal Numbers

In Ohio the federal numbers assigned to these routes will replace the Ohio numbers by which they have been designated in the past. Changing the numbers of these routes necessitated new numbers for several other state routes in order to avoid duplications and inconsistencies in routing.

The United States highways will be marked by the standard U. S. Route marker, which is a shield bearing the name "Ohio" and the letters "U. S." together with the number of the U. S. highway. The background color of the shield is white and the design black. Smaller shields with either the letter "R" or the letter "L" mounted beneath the marker to indicate a turn to the right or left at the next intersection.

State Route Markers

The marker to be used on state routes is an outline map of the state bearing the name "Ohio" and the number of the route in black on a white background. Turns are indicated by circular plates with the letter "R" or "L." Colors of the Ohio route markers are the same as those used on the U. S. highways.

There are 15 United States highways in the state, two of which pass through Marion.

Why Plane Gets Off Course Explained by Navy Bureau

Difference Between Operating Aircraft and Sea Vessels Told

BY CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, July 2—Why can't a plane find its way at sea just as well as a surface ship?

They steer by the same signs.

Why, then, can't a competent navigator, soaring a mile high, determine his position as accurately as one only a few feet above ocean level?—in fact, rather more so, since he's up where he gets a clearer squint at the sky.

Yet—

When San Francisco says goodby to a surface craft, bound for Honolulu, nobody doubts she'll make port about on schedule time.

But in the case of a plane, there's the keenest anxiety lest the fliers miss the Hawaiian group altogether.

THE difference, they say at the navy bureau of navigation, is that small errors which the surface mariner discovers and corrects before they can have serious consequences, become serious to an aviator almost immediately.

A surface, vessel, say, is a little off her course. The mistake's set right before she's steamed many knots.

A plane, traveling three or four times as fast, has gone distinctly wrong in the same length of time.

A FEW hours of thick weather, during which navigation is guesswork to the most skilled sailor, are an inconvenience and an expense but generally no tragedy to a surface boat. She slows down and doesn't permit herself to be led far astray.

A plane has to keep up approximately her regular clip. It will be a miracle if her pilot's guessing is faultless and the least miscalculation on his part is apt to mean disaster.

The transatlantic flight and the flight backward from Hawaii are different propositions.

The distances, it's been shown, are not impossible and there's no missing a continent. Hawaii's a small spot in the Pacific and it's that or nothing—except by the purest accident.

NAVY men likewis epoint out:—

A surface ship may be driven clean out of her master's reckoning. It doesn't happen now, but it used to. Still she floats. Her captain can take his time to find himself.

The aviator's time is limited—very limited—before he's forced to take to an element his vessel never was intended for.

NAVIGATION bureau experts are quite frankly skeptical of the possibilities of aviation on routes where sun and stars must be relied on for guidance.

The uncertainties of the weather, they believe, always will make them dangerous, unless, indeed, air craft are developed which can be fully depended on to float indefinitely in the event of forced descents to the surface—quite possibly a very rough one.

North Atlantic aerial travel and the skirting of the American and Asiatic coasts, by way of the Aleutian and Kuril islands, are discussed in navy circles as not only possibilities, but probabilities of the near future.

The very long hops to small landing places are referred to much more doubtfully.

The problem is regarded not so much one of distance as of path finding.

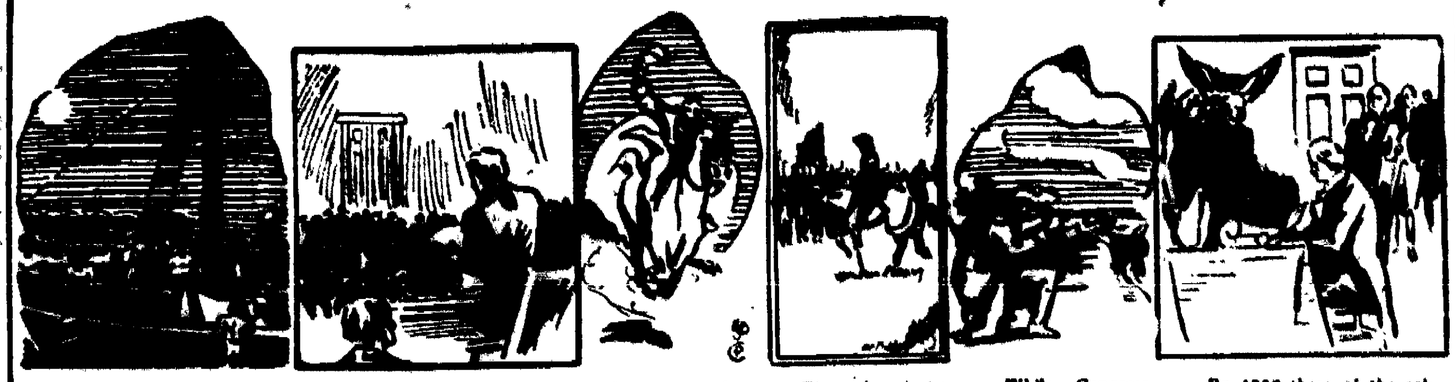
STORY OF UNITED STATES' DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE BRIEFLY TOLD



In 1773 the American colonies had successfully resisted the Townshend Acts, passed by the British crown, to increase its colonial revenue and had obtained the repeal of all duties except that on tea. The colonists had plenty of tea, but they smuggled it in from Holland. The king lowered the duty to a point where it was cheaper to buy tea from England than smuggle it, but the colonists still refused to buy. When the king sent three ships laden with tea to Boston a band of prominent citizens, determined to prevent its landing, disguised themselves as Indians, boarded the boats, and dumped the tea into the harbor. In retaliation, Parliament closed the port, hoping to starve the people into submission.

The passage of the Port Bill and the Regulating Act which virtually annulled the charter of Massachusetts and placed a military governor in power, served to create a sentiment of union, for it made the colonists, all of whom had grievances against the crown, feel that they were bound together in a common cause. They sent food and other necessary articles to Boston to help alleviate the distress there and openly, but quietly, defied the king's authority. The system of corresponding committees, which Samuel Adams had started in 1772, became a Continental Congress, holding its first meeting in Philadelphia in September, 1774, and drew up a Declaration of Rights which was sent to Parliament.

In 1775, orders came from England to arrest Samuel Adams and his friend, John Hancock. On the 18th of April, Gen. Thomas Gage, learning they were in Lexington, sent 800 men to seize them and the military stores which the colonists had gathered in Concord. Dr. Joseph Warren, divining the plans, sent his messenger, Paul Revere, to warn the countryside. Hancock and Adams fled and the colonists hastily gathered together and defeated the British at Concord.

The colonists took their first step in offensive warfare on May 10, 1775, when Ethan Allen, with his Green Mountain boys, captured the fortresses at Ticonderoga and Crown Point. The Continental Congress elected as its president John Hancock, whom the British commander was under orders to arrest for treason. Money was borrowed to buy powder and on the 15th of June George Washington was appointed commander-in-chief of the army.

While Congress was appointing officers and making regulations for the Continental army, British re-inforcements landed in Boston, thereby increasing their number to 10,000. The troops were in command of Gen. William Howe. The British General Gage decided to occupy the heights in Charlestown, known as Breed's and Bunker's hills, commanding Boston. The Americans, quicker to act, erected fortifications on Breed's hill. In the battle the British were victorious, but they suffered heavy losses.

By 1776 three of the colonies had framed new governments in which the king played no part and then the Congress adopted a resolution advising all the other colonies to form like governments. On the 7th of June, Richard Henry Lee of Virginia submitted several resolutions to the Congress, declaring that "these United Colonies are, and of the right ought to be, free and independent States," and that a "plan of confederation be prepared and transmitted to the respective colonies for their consideration and approbation." On the 2nd of July came the final vote on the Declaration of Independence and Thomas Jefferson of Virginia was chosen to draft the document. On the 4th of July it was published to the world and the 13 colonies had become the United States of America.

A. A. EMERY BOUND OVER TO COUNTY GRAND JURY

Former Local Barber Supply Man Released Under $200 Bond

Alex A. Emery, former barber supply man from this city, and who was arrested in Ft. Wayne, Ind., on a charge of having defrauded Mrs. Mildred Caldwell, N. Greenwood-st, out of $120 in the sale of a hair bobbing chair, was bound over to the grand jury by Municipal Judge William R. Martin yesterday afternoon and his bond was fixed at $200.

According to the testimony given by Mrs. Caldwell at the hearing yesterday, she signed an order with Emery for a certain type of hair bobbing chair but when the chair arrived several weeks later, it was not only different from the type of chair she had ordered, but was a used chair, having been, she testified, in use in another local beauty parlor. Mrs. Caldwell was represented by Homer Johnson.

Emery, who was defended by Fred Warner, denied that the chair had been in use, but said it was one he had been carrying in stock. Mrs. Caldwell testified she paid the full amount on the chair the night before it was delivered.

County Must Share Cost In Elimination of Dangerous Railroad Grade Crossings

State Highway Department's Plan Provides for One-Fourth Apportionment of Expense to County; Commissioners Indicate Unwillingness at Presentation

If Marion County is to share in distribution of the $1,000,000 fund set aside for elimination of grade crossings throughout the state during the next two years it will be required to pay a fourth of the cost of work done in this county according to plans placed in effect by the state highway department.

The county commissioners were informed recently by Division Engineer Grover C. Snyder of the state highway department that the schedule includes elimination of at least one grade crossing in this county provided an agreement on the financing could be arranged.

Acceptance Probable

At the time the matter was presented the commissioners indicated an unwillingness to share the cost, maintaining that under provisions of the law the work should be done by the state in conjunction with the railroad companies each paying half of the expense.

As practically all other counties in the state are reported to be lining up and accepting the state's proposition, it is now probable that Marion County will join in and contribute its part to the project.

The state's program is to have 50 per cent of the cost paid by the railroad companies, 25 per cent by the state and 25 per cent by counties.

To Select One of Four

Four crossings in Marion county have been designated as especially dangerous and one of these will be selected as the first to be changed, by placing the roadway either above or below the railway tracks.

The four are the Pennsylvania and Hocking Valley crossings on the Prospect-pk, southwest of the city, the Main-st crossing of the Pennsylvania, north of the city immediately south of Crystal Lake Park, and the Erie and Big Four crossing on the Sandusky-Columbus-rd, about four miles east of Marion.

It is probable that the Hocking Valley crossing on the Prospect-rd will be the one selected, although no definite decision has been made. The county commissioners are planning to present the question to the Marion Auto Club, the Chamber of Commerce and other organizations before taking definite action.

Stretched Over 10 Years

The railroad companies' rights must be given fair consideration in deciding which crossing is selected, Division Engineer Snyder states. The aim will be to plan the work so that distribution of the crossing changes will be equally distributed. This would probably mean that if a crossing over a certain railroad in Marion county is regarded as less dangerous than one over the same road in a neighboring county, the latter would be the one selected for reconstruction.

Under the state plan it is intended to have all of the most dangerous grade crossings in the state replaced by overhead or underground crossings.

This schedule would include the four in Marion County and possibly a few others. The work will require at least 10 years for completion, according to official estimates.

ELKS' LODGE TO SHARE IN PROCEEDS OF SHOW

"Moulders of Men" Will Be Presented at Marion Theater Wednesday, July 6

Marion Lodge of Elks will share in proceeds from showing of the motion picture, "Moulders of Men," at the Marion Theater, Wednesday night, July 6, the theater management having agreed to contribute 10 per cent of the receipts to the lodge monument fund.

The story upon which the picture is based was written by John Chapman Hilder, editor of the Elks' Magazine. It is said to be one of the best pictures of its kind ever filmed, being replete with dramatic situations woven into a tale in which love and comedy are predominant.

A special program has been planned by the Marion Theater orchestra.

The Elks monument fund has been established for the purchase and maintenance of a lodge burial plot at Marion cemetery, the initial contribution having been an endowment of $2,500 from W. H. Guthery, a member of the local lodge.

A statue of an Elk, made of bronze, has been installed on the burial ground.

[illegible] proposal, laid on the [illegible] table at the opening session, Great Britain and the United [illegible] limit their respective cruiser [illegible] 300,000 tons, with 180,000 [illegible]

U. S. Short

[illegible] United States hasn't anything [illegible] tons of cruisers, even counting [illegible] and now almost obsolete [illegible] The proposal as framed here [illegible] that this government [illegible] the excess destroyers and [illegible] the cruisers in such [illegible] to eliminate a lot of old tonnage [illegible] a carefully worked out [illegible] of replacement building gradually [illegible] up to the 300,000 mark.

The latest proposal of the British delegation, however, has rather startled administration officials. The British have announced Minister Hugh S. Gibson [illegible] do not consider 300,000 tons of cruisers sufficient for Britain's needs in protecting her far-flung colonial outposts and trade routes. Five hundred thousand tons would be more like it, the British declared.

Huge Building Program

[illegible] the conference ultimately [illegible] approaching those figures it would mean for the United States a building program of considerable magnitude. Just how great may be gained from the fact that today the United States has but 10 modern cruisers, a total tonnage of 75,000, two under construction and six more authorized but not yet laid down.

It will cost nearly a half billion dollars, naval experts figure, for the United States to reach naval parity with Great Britain on any cruiser although greater than 300,000 tons.

The American delegates are expected to contend strongly for a limitation close to that recommended in the original program, 300,000 tons. In fact, America is willing, as Gibson said at the opening of the conference, to see the tons of 500,000 tons materially reduced.

AGREE TO LIMIT SUBMARINES

Geneva, July 2.—Experts at the tripower conference for the limitation of naval armaments today agreed to limit submarines to a maximum of 1,800 tons and set the age limit on such vessels at sixteen years. They also defined the maximum armament on these submarines at five-inch guns.

No decision was reached, however, on the British proposal to divide submarines into two categories, the second of which would limit undersea craft to 600 tons.

ROAD LEADING NORTH AT LA RUE BEING SURVEYED

Stakes Set Preparatory To Widening Highway as I. C. H. No. 118

Survey of the roadway leading north from LaRue, known as I. C. H. No. 118, is in progress under the direction of David L. Underwood, deputy county surveyor, and stakes are being set preparatory to widening the thoroughfare.

The road is to be widened and improved a distance of three miles, connecting the village of LaRue with the Harding highway. It was formerly a county road but was taken over about [illegible] ago by the state highway department.

[illegible] bound improvement is being installed over the three-mile course. All [illegible] along the route are to be set back.

MAN FINED $15, COSTS ON ASSAULT CHARGE

A fine of $15 and costs and a warning that he would receive the limit if brought back into a court on a similar charge, was given Haze Ashbrook by Mayor pro Judge Martin this morning when he pleaded guilty to striking Raymond Irvin. Ashbrook was arrested at 11 o'clock last night on an affidavit filed by Irvin charging him with assault. He paid the fine and was released. A warning was also given Irvin that he would be similarly dealt with if any more trouble should occur between the two.

TWO MEN ARE FINED ON INTOXICATION CHARGES

Mack Harris, 24, Huntington, W. Va., and James J. owners from various points, some coming from states outside of Ohio.

The baseball game between the Marion Athletics and the Toledo Olds Motors team is expected to draw a large crowd to Lincoln Park. The Toledo team is to be here for two games, one Sunday and the other on the Fourth.

Crystal Lake Attractions

Crystal Lake park and its attractions will help to keep a large share of the local population at home and the park management is preparing to handle crowds of record proportions. Should the temperature continue at its present stage, the park bathing beach is expected to be taxed to capacity by throngs of persons spending a large part of the Fourth immersed in the cool depths of the lake.

In accordance with the annual custom, business will be practically at a standstill throughout the city and county. Factories, stores, courthouse, city hall, postoffice and practically all other places of business will be closed.

The purpose of business men generally is to suspend all commercial activities wherever possible so that the day can be fittingly celebrated not only by themselves but their employes as well.

No Celebration

It will be a quiet celebration, in fact hardly a celebration at all in comparison with the wild and unrestrained demonstrations of olden times. But the next day will practically find all of the citizens, young and old, with their arms and legs intact and otherwise sound physically, a condition which rarely existed in the aftermath of the old-time Fourth.

EXPECT RUSH IN LOCAL MARKETS

Marion retail provisional markets were expected to do a rushing business tonight in an effort to furnish local residents with sufficient supplies to tide them over Sunday and Monday.

Announcement was made today at the office of the Marion Retail Merchants' Bureau that all Marion stores would be closed in observance of Independence Day, July 4. Stores were to close at the regular time tonight and reopen Tuesday morning.

A majority of the local stores will be open Wednesday afternoon instead of closing as is the custom during the summer months.

newspapermen that the fliers planned to return to the United States soon.

"We've got to prepare for the expedition that Commander Byrd is planning to make to the South Pole," he said. "We are due to leave some time in August in a sealing boat."

Not To Fly Back

"Are you going to fly the America back to the United States?" Balchen was asked.

"No, we won't fly back," he replied. "Our plane is almost a total loss. We would require a new one if we flew back. The motors of the America probably are useless now because of the immersion in the salt waters.

Balchen made it plain that any decision regarding a return flight would be up to Commander Byrd after he got in touch with officials of the America Transoceanic Co., sponsors of the flight.

Balchen said he might go to Olso, Norway, to visit his mother, and arrange a few things having to do with the polar expedition before returning to New York.

Acosta, the strapping, black-haired, black-eyed pilot, remarked:

"We could have gone to Rome if we had conserved our gas supply. But we had positive orders to fly to Paris and thats the point we were trying to make.

Enjoy Relaxation

The fliers enjoyed the relaxations of the trip by train from Caen. All along the route they were greeted from railroad depots by assembled throngs.

Unlike Lindbergh all four fliers keenly enjoyed the French wines that were given to them by their hosts at Ver-Sur-Mer and Caen, much to the delight of the Frenchmen.

All along the route from Caen crowds that were going on week-end trips deliberately missed their trains in order to get a glimpse of the fliers.

When the train pulled in the station was jammed with people, every vantage point being occupied. Employes, who had first choice of locations, were established at strategic spots and others were perched high up on the girders in the station. Smoke from the belching engines threw soot all over the railroad employes but they did not mind.

Greeted by Levine

One of the first to greet the fliers was Charles A. Levine, another famous flier, who, with Clarence Chamberlin, recently made a non-stop flight from New York to Germany.

"Congratulations," said Levine, rushing up and shaking Byrd vigorously by the hand.

Levine explained that he had lost Chamberlin somewhere in the crowd.

The trip from Caen was a triumphal procession. Crowds were gathered at every stop. The fliers smiled at the people from the windows and at many stations leaned out and shook hands with those who pressed about the window panes.

Byrd and his companions were kept busy all along the route autographing cards and pictures for their admirers.

To Be Examined

An embassy physician, Dr. Bainbridge, examined all the fliers physically at Caen. He was worried over the condition of Byrd and Acosta. Both of them, it was decided, will go to the American Hospital in Paris after luncheon for another examination.

Near Evreux the train passed a boat train bound for the Iner Aquitania which is enroute to Cherbourg. The passengers gave the fliers a real American cheer.

The fliers were taken from the station, through huge throngs of people, to the Continental Hotel.

There they appeared on the balcony of the Continental, which was decorated with American and French flags.

Five thousand persons in the streets below cheered them wildly. The fliers acknowledged the welcome with bows and waves of their hands. The cheering was continuous.

Prepare for Luncheon

Finally, the fliers left the balcony, went to their rooms, bathed, shaved and prepared for a luncheon in their honor at the Inter-Allied Club given by Sheldon Witehouse, American charge d'affairs.

The streets were so jammed with people that it required half an hour for the automobile containing the fliers to make the trip from the railroad station to the Continental. Every window along the route was occupied and people leaned out perilously to get a glimpse of the airmen and to cheer them. The fliers' car was preceded by four automobiles containing officials and decorated with flags.

Only a few persons knew the time of the Americans' departure from Caen today and consequently there was only a small crowd at the railway station. But they cheered with a will as the Americans boarded the train and it drew away from the depot.

Guests at Dinner

Noville, who comes of French parentage and can speak some French, stuck his head from a compartment window as the train moved off and shouted:

"A une autrefois."

The Americans had been the overnight guests of M. Solitas, prefect of the department of Calvados of the prefecture.

There's no occasion for England to get cheeky over her short-time solar eclipse. The sun has been eclipsed over here the big end of the time for weeks and weeks and weeks.

We seem to have developed o'er here in America the best motor extant for aeroplane purposes, but our control of weather conditions hasn't yet reached a point which can truthfully be said to be ideal.

The fact that the United States has closed its fiscal year with a surplus of $600,000 should end all thought of a special session. During the vacation season, when our minds are necessarily diverted from business matters, is no time to turn congress loose on a surplus like that.

The people of Detroit voted overwhelmingly for the international bridge to connect that city and Windsor, Canada. Manifestly, the people of the City of the Straits are of the opinion that every man should be given opportunity to be the guardian of his own personal drought.

The apparent absence of any and all envy and jealousy among the top-notchers in the field of aeronautics is in marked contrast to the feeling displayed by the bright lights of the squared circle. Still, let us not be unduly critical. The latter are probably acting right up to their lights.

Here the president has gone a good bit of the way across the continent to enjoy a cool summer vacation only to hit more heat than he left at home, and Washington isn't any up-to-date electric ice box at that. And, to add to the annoyance, there probably isn't an electric fan about the place.

Fog is said to be the greatest handicap the aviator has to face, and yet all the notable flights made by Americans this year were started in May and June, the greatest iceberg months of the year, and where there are icebergs in spring or summer there are bound to be fogs.

From the manner in which Mr. Coolidge holds up his day's catch before the camera, it's our guess that, in his boyhood days, he never experienced the delight of stringing his fish on a bent limb or carrying 'em home in his pockets.

General Consul Orville S. Poland, of the New York branch of the Anti-Saloon league gravely fears that the removal of Major Mills as prohibition administrator means that New York will become a "wide-open" city. Without going into the merit of the Mills case, a lot of us will wonder what Mr. Poland considers the conditions in New York City to be as they are as regards wide-openness.

Railroads Effecting Economies.

Some of the economies in operation being practiced by the railroads of the land are almost unbelievable. By way of illustration, figures just given out by the Interstate Commerce commission show that, during the first four months of the present year, they consumed almost 2,200,000 tons of coal less than they would have consumed if they had consumed as much in proportion to the freight and passenger service rendered as they did in the corresponding months of 1926. At the average price paid for coal this effected a saving of $5,500,000. The average amount of coal consumed per 1,000 gross-ton miles of freight was reduced from 180 to 141 pounds, and a corresponding saving was made in passenger service. At the same rate, the saving effected for the present year as compared with 1926 will be $17,000,000.

These figures are the more impressive when it is pointed out that there has been a steady marked saving ever since 1920. Compared with that year, the saving made in 1921 was $26,538,000; in 1922 it was $23,670,000; in 1923 it mounted to $28,163,000; the following year it was $43,936,000; in 1925 it went up to $66,293,000, and last year, 1926, it reached the splendid total of $75,640,000, the grand total for the six years being $269,223,000 saved in coal alone. The saving this year over 1926, it is estimated, will be about $93,500,000. If the reduced consumption of coal for the first four months of the year is maintained throughout the twelve, the average consumption per 1,000 gross-ton miles in 1927 will be but 139 tons, or twenty-one per cent. less than in 1923. It is by such economies in operation, effected by physical improvements and increases in efficiency of operation, that the railroads in a measure, at least, are meeting the increase in taxes assessed against them, increased wages and somewhat decreased rates.

If such economies can be accomplished by great corporations, why not all up and down the line? Have we not here a matter for emulation by states, counties, municipalities, corporations of all kinds, firms and individuals?

American Aeroplane Motors.

For the past five or six weeks, conversation throughout this country and western Europe, at least, has centered very largely on aeroplane flights and fliers. Literally miles of matter have appeared in the newspapers of this and other lands on the subject. We have read columns upon columns about this aviator or that, what he had done, was doing or was expected to do.

We have no complaint on this score. We are rather glad that things have been as they have been. It has been a welcome change from the customary grind, a welcome departure from the stories of crime, of vileness, of marital difficulties, of so-called "lovers'" trials and troubles and woes. We believe the public appreciated it far above the ordinary. It has been news so big and engrossing that it was next to impossible to enlarge upon its bigness or to add to its interest.

But of all the miles of matter printed, of all the millions of words uttered by mouth or in type, comparatively few bore upon one phase of the subject which ranks in importance with any, and in its importance surmounts most. We refer to the motor which has been used in all the successful American flights, a motor developed to its present state of high effectiveness through the vision of Commander E. E. Wilson and Lieutenant Commander Bruce G. Leighton of the bureau of aeronautics.

In the face of criticism and skepticism, Lieutenant Commander Leighton adhered to his ideas and brought about the adoption of the Wright Whirlwind engine as the standard engine for navy fighting and observation aircraft in the fleet.

Three years ago Commander Leighton was relieved by Commander Wilson, who continued the development of the Whirlwind engine to the point where it became widely used commercially because of its durability and dependability. Commander Wilson further brought about development of the Pratt and Whitney Wasp engine, a 400-horsepower, radial air-colled engine, with which the United States recently brought back five world's seaplane records, including two altitude records and three speed records. Commander Wilson further directed the development of the Pratt and Whitney Hornet, 500-horsepower radial, and the Wright Cyclone, also a 500-horsepower engine. It was the Pratt and Whitney Hornet which solved the problem of the navy's combined scouting, torpedo and bombing aeroplane.

The air-cooled Wright Whirlwind motor enabled Byrd to fly to the North pole and return. Chamberlin and Acosta used it in their fifty-one-hour record endurance test. Lindbergh blazed the way across the Atlantic from New York to Paris with the same motor, and it was used by Chamberlin in his long flight to Germany. The story is the same in the great Pacific flight of Maitland and Hegenberger, and the last tribute to this American motor's worth is offered by the flight of Byrd and his companions in the America. In all these cases, the motor answered every call made upon it.

Tests show that this motor, which has proved so successful in all the great flights it has been called upon to make, has the lowest fuel consumption to the horsepower of any aviation engine available. Tests have also demonstrated that it is dependable for 250 flying hours between overhaulings and that its life is in excess of 2,000 flying hours, which means in excess, under usual flying conditions, of 200,000 miles.

It will interest critics of our government's aviation policy to know that it has purchased 1,200 of these Wright air-cooled motors at a cost of $10,000,000, thus giving it what is the finest and most dependable aeroplane engine yet developed, a fact which is generally admitted by the aviation experts of the Old world as well as those of our own land, saving and excepting always the critics of our government's aviation policy, who refuse to see anything good or praiseworthy developed under it.

Accuracy in Historical Events.

Thursday afternoon of this week the International League of Aviators and the French War Pilots' association unveiled a tablet placed at the exact spot upon which Lindbergh landed at Le Bourget field, in commemoration of the pioneer crossing of the North Atlantic's breadth by an aeroplane.

Lindbergh's landing was made on the night of May 22. The tablet was prepared and laid within thirty days of that date and unveiled with appropriate ceremonies June 30, just thirty-nine days after the ending of his epochal flight.

In many ways and respects, the New world is infinitely preferable to the Old, but not in this. The Old world pays more attention to historic facts and places, to scenes which are historic or which the Old world people deem will become historic. They have great reverence for the scenes of historic events and for accuracy of all facts in connection with them. They do not wait until months, perhaps years, have passed to make record of them. They are marked or recorded, whichever it may be, while the events are fresh in the minds of all. Evidences of this may be had all over Europe. The chances are a thousand to one that the exact spot on which "The Spirit of St. Louis" came to rest that memorable night was carefully marked before the plane was moved from its position as Lindbergh stepped out of it, and without a doubt there is record of some kind of the exact spot upon which he first stepped.

It may be held that we of America are too busy and have too many matters of more importance to look after than such matters as these, and it is possible that Europeans go to extremes in this respect, but it is just as possible that we Americans go too far to the other extreme in such matters; that we do not pay enough attention to scenes of historic events and are not sufficiently accurate, relying far too much upon possible recollections to reconstruct such scenes.

There are many matters in which we can teach Europe; there are many matters in which we may learn from Europe and this is one of them.

Mountains and Sea Invite World.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

This is the camping season. Great groups of boys and girls, of grown-ups, too, will rush to the seaside or the mountains.

I am glad this is true. Nothing is better for city folks than a month in the country. Nothing is better for country folks than a change from the humdrum of home life.

I must remind you, though, unsupervised mass camping may be dangerous. Automobile camps, Scout camps, public park camps, unless under scientific oversight, might become the nesting place of epidemic disease.

It is essential that a watchful eye be on the outlook for contagions and infections. Water supply and waste disposal must be above criticism. The milk must come from an approved source. There must be regular and most thorough inspection of campers, food handlers and food supplies.

Fire hazards, swimming dangers, unsafe boats, insect pests and reptiles, poison ivy and every possible menace to the welfare of the campers and park visitors must be under control of the management. These are obligations which run with the privilege of opening parks to the public.

Over-fatigue is even worse than laziness. There must be watchful care of the willing souls in weak bodies. Contests should be limited to the physically fit and arranged for after heart and general muscles are ready for them.

Trained oversight is just as necessary as lake and field and forest. With such supervision the public parks and other camping places are among the chief blessings of modern civilization.

If you don't go camping, make some plan for a vacation this Summer. Everybody needs the change. Mother needs it, too. Let the family run the house for a few days. Mother will enjoy somebody else's cooking for a while, and let it be said, will enjoy her own more than ever when she gets home.

There is nothing like a change to stimulate the body. It gives an impulse toward health and increased vigor.

From Our Readers.

INTERLUDE.

The days grow shorter, the nights grow longer,
The headstones thicken along the way;
And life grows sadder, but love grows stronger
For those who walk with us, day by day.

The tears come quicker, the laugh comes slower,
The courage is lesser to do and dare;
And the tide of joy in the heart runs lower,
And seldom covers the reefs of care.

But all true things in the world seem truer,
And the better things of the earth seem best;
And friends are dearer as friends are fewer,
And love is all as our sun dips west.

Then let us clasp hands as we walk together,
And let us speak softly, in love's sweet tone,
For no man knows, on the morrow, whether
We two pass by, or but one alone.

Editorial Comment.

DON'T FORGET THE MUSTARD.

Nobody takes walks any more, and the buggy ride is obsolete; but one hallowed institution still prevails in the land, and that is the picnic. To be sure, it has changed and become grand instead of simple, but in one form or another it still exists. Take the large general picnic. The crowd went in fram wagons to some peaceful woods, where the children thought themselves endowed with all delights if rope swings were put up and the ham sandwiches were plentiful. A pleasant day was spent by all, including the woodland ant, which had been expecting the day for upwards of a year, and the party sang its way homeward in the clover-scented dusk, yawned through its evening chores, and went to bed.

Now the children hardly recognize a rope swing. It must be a roller coaster, a deafening merry-go-round, an "aeroplane" ride, in order to gain their patronage. He who goes on such a picnic must not forget his pocketbook, nor restrict himself to a moderate sum, or he will hear from the family about it. As for the jolly ride home in the evening, the fun at the park only begins about the time the lights go on, and nobody considers leaving much before midnight.

The automobile has doubtless done much to perpetuate the art of picnicking, and these excursions where the party goes to some sylvan spot and there debarks and eats among the enchantments of natural scenery hold much closer to the original idea. Of course, the equipment nowadays is very silver-plated indeed, what with hot bottles and cold bottles and plates, and even forks, and it makes one a little homesick for the days when washing after dinner was just as desirable as before it.

Some of the dear old features remain unchanged, however. Poison ivy has just the same surprising after-effects, the sudden shower is just as wet, and now and then one comes across a jewel of a lady who is still afraid of cows. What would a picnic be without these interesting hazards? In spite of them all we are strongly in favor of the institution and its perpetuation. As long as the hard-boiled egg and the pickle flourish in the land let us by all means go picnicking.—Philadelphia Record.

LUXURIOUS LINERS.

The French line's elegant new flagship, the Ile de France, now in New York on her maiden voyage, calls attention again to the competition developing among continental European countries in the field of ocean shipping. Only a few month's ago the Hamburg-American line's luxury ship, the New York, completed her first voyage, and soon after announcement came of the pending consolidation of all Italian steamships, and the contemplated construction of two giant liners, the Rex and Dux. British construction in this field has been at a standstill, but rumors have been heard of plans of the Cunard and White Star companies to build new vessels of the Mauretania and Majestic type.

New construction of this kind is made possible today by the increase in the demand for transatlantic service of the de luxe type. The tremendous prosperity of the United States and the interest in foreign travel, born in part of the war, are probably the largest factors in this demand. It is significant that it arises when the volume of available merchant shipping is well ahead of demand, and at a time when the industry as a whole is not making large profits.

The history of merchant ships of this type may prove similar to that of the first de luxe trains operated by the trunk line railroads. The Twentieth Century Limited, for example, was put on in the first instance as an advertising medium, but with the change in the demands of the traveling public, it became a source of great profit, and now must be operated in a number of sections. — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

Nathan Straus, New York, great giver to good causes, quotes this maxim: "What you give in health is gold; what you give in sickness is silver; what you give after death is lead."

One who can afford to give has a right to the pleasure which comes with generosity. He has the advantage of being able to see that his money is spent as he would have it spent. Giving, in health, is the happiest giving of all.

What is wealth? You have millions, but don't realize it. A multimillionaire, stranded in the midst of a wide desert, would barter all his riches for a drink of water. The poorest American laborer, with a bit of a home to come to at night, is rich compared with a Chinese coolie.

Some day the rays of the sun may run dynamos to heat and energize the world. What, then, becomes of the coal owners? Wealth is comparative. It depends on environment. Americans, adding up what they have, find they know little of material poverty.

Real poverty is poverty of appreciation, poverty of imagination, poverty of the soul.

Don't be discouraged because we have some intolerance and misunderstanding in America. The amazing thing is that we get along so well. American "prospects" come from all quarters of the globe, bearing with them every variety of national opinion and every variety of religious creed. No matter if your ancestors came over in the Mayflower—there must have been several thousand passengers—remember that America today is being made up of new "prospects," wide apart in every way except in their humanity.

It is a triumph that we have less and less intolerance. Look about you. Read books and newspapers. You find the spirit of tolerance, not on the way out, but on the way in.

Let's close today with a rhyme read from the bench of a Chicago judge who has had much success in smoothing the waters of domestic inharmony. Says Judge Sabbath:

A little more kindness,
A little less creed;
A little more giving,
A little less greed.

A little more smile,
A little less frown;
A little less kicking
A man when he's down.

A little more "we,"
A little less "I,"
A little more laugh,
A little less cry.

A little more flowers
On the pathway of life,
And fewer on graves
At the end of the strife.

Dinner Stories.

An old woman was going down a coal mine for the first time in her life. As the cage descended she noticed how she and the rest of the party were dependent upon a single rope to which it was attached.

"Do you think it is quite safe?" she asked a miner, as she glanced up at the rope.

"Don't you fear, mum," was the reply. "You're quite safe. These ropes are guaranteed to last exactly twelve months, and this one isn't due to be renewed till tomorrow."

A little girl was put in an upper berth for the first time. She kept crying till her mother told her not to be afraid because God would watch over her.

"Mother, are you there?" she cried.

"Yes."

"Father, are you there?"

"Yeah—"

A fellow passenger lost all patience at this point and bellowed forth:

"Your father and mother and brothers and sisters and aunts and uncles and cousins. All here; now go to sleep."

There was a pause, then, very softly:

"Mamma."

"Well?"

"Was that God?"

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York, July 2 — Being a wide-eyed country boy, there is always an E. Phillips Oppenheim glamour about the crowds drifting to the coffee-rooms of smart cafes after dinner. There is a sort of enameled isolation rarely found elsewhere.

There is the creamy sheen of pearls and the sparkle of diamonds. Languid ladies puff cigaret smoke through long holders and monocled, waisted young men double up like pocket rules. Above the police murmur one somehow senses domestic deceit and perhaps international intrigue, but the overtone is thoroughly worldly and glamourous.

In all such gatherings are adventurers and adventuresses, who float around the world on the wings of chance, skillfully plucking hours of grandeur by polite cadging. Deft, impassive waiters, darting uniformed pages and discreetly modulated music add high lights to the picture.

Amid the chatter, low laughter and exotic perfumes there is, to me, invariably a gripping tautness felt among schemers. Rouged women who have passed their noontime hope for one more opportunity to banish the specter of old-age poverty.

And those frank male adventurers whose insular manners make feminine hearts pit-a-pat, are on the alert. Then there are those ponderous dowagers who try to hide plumpness behind sables, and gray-haired men trying to achieve youthfulness with red rosettes in their buttonholes.

It is among such people the transatlantic pretenders cast honeyed bait. Two famous heiresses have recently stated in Paris divorce courts that the romances which ended in sudden marriages began with casual flirtations in cafes.

There are many suave idlers in New York who drop into the coffee lounges immaculately dressed, at the right hour, to give the impression they have dined there. Head waiters call them "squatters," but like many other nuisances in this town they must be tolerated.

But the most amusing type of all in the swank cafe world is the harmless young Britisher with his impeccable good form, trying laboriously to hide the big-hearted demeanor the American youth wears on his sleeve. He has just popped in and is feeling tophole. He seems all cuffs and teeth, but there is nothing of the cadging adventurer about him. He is just a silly old bean. But I suppose our emotional young Americans appear just as silly to the British.

The streets of New York are drained of young boys and girls in mid-summer. Nearly all, even in poorer sections, are off to tented camps in the woods and along the streams, returning in late autumn, tanned and rejuvenated. Parents are relieved of their responsibilities for a season and slum children acquire a polish that is pleasant.

The metamorphosis of boys in select private schools is quite amazing. I know a gangly-legged lad who seemed all feet, knuckles and awkwardness a year ago. I saw him the other day. He had the self-assurance of a grown-up. He knew how to meet people pleasantly and without turning red to his ears. There was nothing fresh or forward—but a confidence. He spoke when he was spoken to, but it was easy to see he had ideas of his own. He had a naturally acquired politeness—indeed, a sangfroid, whereas a year before he would not come into a room where there were strangers unless he was dragged.

This is all a great change from old days. Most of us lived in that seclusion described by Al Jolson, who said he was nineteen years old before he knew there was anything to a chicken but a neck.—Copyright, 1927.

Views of Those in Public Eye.

S. DAVIES WARFIELD.

Solomon Davies Warfield began his career as a clerk in a sugar importing house. He organized the Continental Trust company in 1898, and has been president of it since its founding. He was a member of the organization committee that consolidated and built railway properties constituting the present Seaboard Air Line railway, of which he is now president and chairman of the board. Warfield was one of the pioneers in the development of the Susquehanna river for power purposes. He was postmaster of the city of Baltimore from 1894 to 1905.

President Warfield is not an enthusiast regarding great railroad consolidations. He says:

"When railroad stocks are acquired for control prior to consolidation, if we are to judge the future by the past, the prices to be paid must necessarily add greatly to the capitalization of the larger systems.

"While railroad rates are to be adjusted to yield a return on the value of a group of railroad properties, the percentage return must be sufficient to enable a railroad to market the securities issued by it, to pay interest on its bonds, or other securities, and dividends on its stock, particularly when used in financing its needs.

"Will congress encourage a scramble in the stock market by promoters to gain control of a railroad, and promote large commissions to those who are interested in consolidating such properties by enacting legislation that will encourage such policies, particularly where the economies stated as possible are not attainable?

"Any proposed legislation of this sort doubtless will have opposition, not alone because of these considerations, but because the business of the country has been built up by the railroads under competitive conditions which will be disturbed should great consolidations of continuous railroad mileage be sought under the plans of large mergers such as are now under discussion."

RAPID GROWTH EXPERIENCED BY LOCAL CONCERN

Marion Coca Cola Bottling Co. Enjoys Prosperous Business Since Start

To have an honorable business you must make an honorable product and the man who buys that product must get his money's worth. In the Coca Cola bottling business you get your money's worth.

There is no other article or product known to the world that can be covered by a nickel. It is a product of pure and wholesome ingredients gathered from the four corners of the earth manufactured under the most scientifically controlled sanitary conditions, in the most wholesome way, of the purest ingredients, an answer to thirst and a relief with a few moments of relaxation plus satisfaction for five cents.

Maintains Friends

Like all great men, all great businesses and all great products have friends. This product is Coca Cola. It is only the dealers of Marion who have an idea how many friends Coca Cola has, how many people believe in it and how many people ask for it. Eight million a day, and more being added. It has a goodwill that has stood the test of panic, of depression, of catastrophe, of war, of syrup shortage, and high prices. Everything that can happen to a business has happened to this great business, and its friends have stuck, and they have stood loyally.

This business is in vogue. It is a popular business. Eight million people a day—3,700,000,000 last year—reached out for this drink, 3,700,000,000 thirsts quenched, 3,700,000,000 hands extended for the product of this business! From 3,000 drinks in 1886 to more than 3,000,000,000 in 1926.

Service Slogan

One of the essentials to make a business great is that it must be of service to man. More than that, this business gives to the trade, a product that is of service to the individuals in the world, a respite, a recreation, a contribution to sociability. It has imparted zest and enjoyment to the drinker. It breaks monotony. It has quenched thirst.

The Marion Coca Cola Bottling Co. has doubled its Coca Cola sales since starting in operation at No. 707 Bennett st, and it feels that it not only owes this increased production to the dealers of Marion, but to the consuming public as well. Delivery to private residences was almost a thing unheard of when this factory started operation in 1921, but today in many homes Coca Cola or carbonated beverages have become a part of the daily diet.

Not only does this company bottle "Coca Cola" and "Whistle," the two nationally advertised drinks, but also manufactures a full line of soda waters.

LUMBERMEN OPTIMISTIC OVER SUMMER TRADE

Report of Survey Shows City Residential Building Has Maintained Volume

In its weekly market review, the American Lumberman, Chicago, says:

Business in softwood has slowed down during the last two weeks. Distributors had expected that demand would be better sustained, as they know that there are large needs to be supplied. City residential building has kept up a volume which, despite all handicaps, compares very favorably with that for 1925, though it is below the exceptional totals for last year, while farm prospects generally are very encouraging. Various influences, however, keep down farm demand in large sections of the country, and the retail lumbermen, confident of quick deliveries as they need stock for replenishment, are buying only as they sell.

"CORRECT POSTURE"

Women at Rochester University Organize Own Police Force

Rochester, June 2—The University of Rochester Women's College has organized their own police force.

There is no crime wave and as far as the pretty co-ed patrolmen care for the disappearance of compacts and feminine furbelows may go on unchecked as far as they are concerned.

They are posture police. No more will the debutante slouch go unchecked and the rounded shoulders of undergraduates will straighten at the reprimands of the watchful officers, who have pledged themselves to a better and better posture.

Posters representing good and bad posture have been displayed and members of the women's college will just have to live up to their advice.

NORWEGIAN FLIER HUNTS REINDEER IN AIRPLANE

Oslo, July 2—Braving blinding snow storms and a frozen atmosphere, Lieutenant Reistad, of the Norwegian flying corps, set out in an airplane to locate a herd of 300 reindeer lost in a snowstorm between the File Mountains and the western coast. Along with him were a mechanic and herdsman.

The reindeer are worth 40,000 kroner. The plane was equipped with skis instead of wheels.

When Modern Business Girl Goes On Her Vacation This Summer

IF there is one fly in the ointment of the woman who is to start on our vacation it is the question, "What shall I take to wear?" Of course the answer depends largely on where she is going. If she visits friends and relatives in another city she will require very different clothes from those suitable for wear at a hotel where she is not known or on a travel trip.

The collection pictured here would be suitable—with a few embellishments and additions—for almost any kind of vacation except roughing it.

An ensemble in black and white was chosen for traveling (shown at the extreme left). A two-piece frock consisting of black and white plaid blouse and black flat crepe skirt, box pleated and trimmed with the plaid is worn under a black kasha coat trimmed with black and white calf collar and sleeve bands. A smart black felt Toque with white flower trimming, black patent leather pumps and gunmetal hose completes the traveling costume. Colleen Moore posed.

Now for tennis, boating, etc., a knitted silk suit in gay stripes (second from left) is tucked into the trun or suitcase. It is not easily crushed and as pictured is in two pieces, the jumper in three color stripes with long sleeves and V neck, and the skirt pleated with the stripes at the bottom.

For afternoon wear one of the pretty printed frocks in floral design might be chosen. The one adorning the center of the picture is in striking design banded in solid color. You may not be able to take the large brimmed hat that adds so much to the picturesque appearance of this costume, but if not, one of the tiny, noncrushable crochets or similar materials will answer as well, and be easily carried.

The evening dress is more of a problem. Black chiffon and lace is chosen here (second from right, in a style that would answer for afternoon wear as well as evening. A moire belt with rhinestone buckle and chiffon shoulder flower give it a touch of color. The sleeves might be left out and the neck lowered to make it more truly an evening gown.

Of course one must have a negligee and as this outfit was chosen for its practicability, this printed chiffon in several colors will make a pretty and sensible addition. Wide bands on sleeves and down the front are of crepe satin in a soft harmonizing shade.

About Maids
Old Fourth
Boon to Women

BY EDNA S. DUTTON

THE day of the down-trodden scullery maid has long since taken its place with covered buggies, starched petticoats and the like, and in its place has come the maid who has her day of regularly and reigns supreme in her domain. Wages are an item too to be considered and often if the employer can not meet the demand Miss Maid betakes herself elsewhere knowing full well that she will not be long out of a job. Out in the effete east, women who have this problem to deal with have gone into it seriously and are working out a mistress-maid arrangement which places the maid in the ranks of the business woman. She lives at the Y. W. C. A. in a boarding house or at home, gets on the job at a certain hour, takes a half hour out for luncheon which she either brings herself or pays her employer 30 cents for, receives a "salary" and not "wages" at the rate of 40 cents an hour and at the end of the day she makes out a report, giving the time of her arrival, work done and the time of quitting and she is listed as a household assistant. The plan is to interest capable women in domestic service and reports show that already women in other occupations are forsaking them for housework.

I HAD occasion to listen in on a conversation that had to do with the national holiday we are about to celebrate and according to these two, we of the current year know nothing about a real celebration. Folks in the good old days often stayed up all night to be the first to fire off the anvil and fire crackers boomed from early dawn to far into the night. Picnics weren't so popular, dinner was usually at some one's home with all the relatives, big and little, from far and near as guests. It was hard to tell, too, which got the heaviest vote as the piece de resistance, the chicken or the home-made ice-cream. All sorts of races and prizes of coarse and if those in charge of affairs wanted to splurge, why a balloon ascension was on the program. It was easy to tell where the most popular spot in the festival area was and that was the open air dance pavilion erected for that particular day only. Being aeons before the Charleston or Black Bottom ever were dreamed of the old-fashioned square dance was "all the go" and those making up the sets swung on the corner on a platform made of some mighty rough boards to lively music from a couple of fiddles and an organ transported for the day from its sequestered nook in the corner of some one's parlor. Boughs from a nearby forest furnished a covering for the pavilion and the customers might quench their thirst between dances from a refreshment stand operated by a thrifty native at one end of the pavilion. Of course once in a while some one wanted to dance who had a little too much on board but as a whole the crowd was as orderly as any nowadays, according to my informants.

DID you ever think you'd just love to give a card party if it weren't for the ordeal of laundering the covers after the affair? Well, your grief along that line is at an end for now you may purchase just the niftiest looking paper covers, cleverly decorated and with the score sheets painted right on them. To be sure they only can be used once but who wouldn't shoot a thin dime or more to get out of laundering a dozen covers?

PARIS PAPERS SNIFF

Sarcastic Over Continued Rejection of French Plays By U. S.

Paris, July 2—French papers are [illegible] sarcastically over America's continued rejection of their books and plays.

When Maurice Dekobra's book, "The Madonna of the Sleepings" was withdrawn from the bookstalls recently Frau was mildly surprised. French critics found the novel entertaining and amusing and the sales were enormous, proving that the majority of the people also approved.

The banning of the much discussed play, "The Captive" was ridiculed and not understood. One paper plainly stated that American play censors showed a lack of understanding and intelligence in barring a highly moral play, written truthfully. "The Captive" after a two year run is still playing to packed houses in Paris.

The French Press says that "American's shamed feeling" puzzles them. "What," they are exclaiming "does this statue of Liberty actually stand for?"

$8,000,000 PAID BY CALIFORNIA BOOSTING PLAY

Municipalities Invest 83 Millions in Parks and Enjoy Themselves

Sacramento, Cal., July 2—California municipalities spent nearly $8,000,000 last year demonstrating to the wide world that they believe in the slogan, "It Pays to Play."

On top of that, 195 cities, towns and hamlets reported a permanent investment in parks and playgrounds reaching the tremendous sum of $83,871,461.35.

And then, because Californians are the world's best read citizens boasting a per capita book record which beats that of old London, or blase New York, these same cities boosted their capital investment in municipal libraries to $14,052,550.

San Francisco Library

San Francisco, "the city that knows how," outstripped all other sections of the state in lavishness of entertainment for its guests, so far as city expenditures are reported, spending a total of $473,363.64 for music and celebrations alone, according to State Controller Ray L. Riley, who keeps tab on city outlays.

Los Angeles jumped to the front in improving and maintaining city parks, according to the state report, spending $713,229.28 on parks and trees and bringing its total park investment to $23,226,626. San Francisco, second in line, spent $206,767.75, keeping an edge on Los Angeles in the matter of total park outlay with an aggregate investment of $25,072,730.16. Oakland, with $7,484,140.05 invested in its city parks and playgrounds, spent $154,800.56 additional during the year, while San Diego, with $8,305,517.01 worth of parks, expended $138,486.50 in bettering them.

Play Items Big

Outlay on parks, playgrounds, trees and "play items" during the recent months, exclusive of maintenance and betterment costs, were reported for the four leading cities as follows: San Francisco, $755,681.79; Los Angeles, $586,225.30; Oakland, $225,172.12; San Diego, $30,904.05.

In its investment in books and city library equipment, Los Angeles, with a library laboratory valued at $4,732,070 led the field of California cities by a good margin. San Francisco, second, brought its library investment to $2,731,561.21 during the year just ended; Oakland reported an investment of $884,302.02, and San Diego was found with $469,700.

San Francisco, with a city hall worth $7,086,653.13, transacts its municipal business in the most expensive government house in the state and one of the best in the nation. Los Angeles is second, housing its officials in a city hall worth $4,620,845, the report states.

PAINTED RUG

A housewife writes: "Having a fiber rug which had lost all its brightness, I decided to paint it. Two coats of apple green floor paint applied to the rug which had been scrubbed and thoroughly dried, formed the background for a stenciled border done in pale yellow. A coats of varnish over all made it possible to wash the rug as you would wash a floor."

KONJOLA ENDED MY RHEUMATISM; ALL PAINS GONE

Marion Lady Rejoices Over Health She Derived From Celebrated New Medicine

More convincing evidence of the extreme power of this new Konjola medical compound, which is being introduced to Marion people by The Konjola Man in person at The Stump Pharmacy, this city, is told in a statement, made just a few days ago, by

MRS. H. J. PHELPS

Mrs. H. J. Phelps, living on Ruth Avenue, Marion. She tells about the work of Konjola in the following report:

"For years and years I have treated with different remedies for rheumatism," said Mrs. Phelps, "but never found the right medicine until I got this Konjola. It ended my rheumatism so that all pains are gone and I am feeling better in general than I have in years.

"The joints of my knees is where I always had been suffering the most. My limbs were swollen, and the pains were dreadful at all times. Both day and night I was in misery. Most of the time I couldn't sleep at all, and when I did rest it was only in short periods. I seemed to roll and toss for hours, because my nerves were unstrung, and all these miseries kept hanging over me until I was getting weaker all the time.

"I noticed that Konjola was recommended by so many people here in Marion, and I had confidence in this medicine. It certainly did wonders in my case and I want others to benefit like I have. The swelling is all gone from my knees, and there is not a single ache or pain in my body. It is a blessing just to sleep good, and I never wake up or have nervous spells like I did before. This alone is worth the world to me. Konjola certainly deserves all the great praise so many people are giving it, and I want to make this statement to help others."

The Konjola Man is at the Stump Pharmacy (Stump & Sams), 121 South Main Street, Marion, where he is daily meeting the local public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy. Free samples given.—Adv.

Out of the Ages

BY MARSHALL N. HALL
Author of "The Valley of Silent Men" and "People of the Dusk"

LARRY GRENFALL, American traveler and student of Eastern magic, receives a telephone call from

BEN MASOUR, cosmopolite and old friend, saying he must see him at once. Larry goes and Mansour tells him he is about to die and that he wants him to go to Morocco, where he, Mansour, is a sherif or native ruler. He is to find the Temple, endure the Ordeal, crush the Group and put Mansour's son on the throne. A Moor appears and gives Mansour a token, a ruby ring which Larry later wears. The Moor also throws into the room a tiny ivory tiger—the Striped Death. Mansour dies and his body disappears—carried off by the Moors. Larry goes to Morocco, finds

OMAR BEN MEDJAD, who dresses him as a wizard, and as Youssef el-Habassi he starts on his travels. He soon meets

ALLAL ABDI, Mansour's son, who travels with him. The two have many adventures, and Larry discovers that the supposed son is in reality a daughter. The two grow to love one another, but Benna is spirited away from Larry in the hut of a holy man to whom he is demonstrating his powers as a wizard. In search for her he is attacked by a trained tiger killer, the Striped Death, whom he kills. He reaches the Throne room of the Berbers, is questioned about future doings of the tribe and thrown into prison where he finds Benna. He endures the trial by fire, coming out victorious by virtue of dynamite cubes which he has concealed in his clothing and which he throws into the fire, killing a number of Moors, among them the leader, the Marabout of Adrar, whose robe and mask he takes. As Tribe One, the leader, he confers with the other members of the group and discovers that Tribe Two is no other than Omar ben Medjad.

"Tenderly, he lowered his head and touched his lips to the gleaming skin."

CHAPTER FORTY-SIX

Omar ben Medjad became suddenly ...

"The time when we must strike ... near, dear friend. The Sacred ... now being taken from its ... place. As Tribe One of the ... Group, you will receive the ... in your hands, and be charged with its keeping until the dawn and its ... Guard it as you guard your ... Grenfall, and use it in the furtherance of Spain's aims in this benighted country. I hear footsteps; belike it is Tribe Six with the girl. Think you can master yourself in her presence?"

"I did so not so many hours since," Larry returned simply, "when she came ... with the prisoners fresh from the ... of her keepers."

He saw Omar's blazing eyes fixed on him in sympathy and admiration.

"And you touched her not?"

"I greeted her simply as I would have greeted the youth Allal Abdi," he said. "Then, by Allah, you love her, Grenfall, and I am glad." With his cryptic utterance Tribe Two resumed his posture on the cushions and remained silent as Tribe Six, leading Benna, approached.

The girl presented a forlorn figure indeed. Utter despair and misery were in her glorious eyes and sorrow straightened the tiny up-curls of her full, red mouth. Head drooping, she was led before Larry and Tribe Six spoke:

"Here is the youth, Tribe One, but as Allah lives he seems to pine away. His despair seems boundless."

"And why do you sorrow, Allal Abdi?" Larry asked, using every ounce of his will power to make the question casual, to imitate the somewhat croaking nasal tones of the Marabout of Adrar.

"One whom I hold dearer than all others has gone to the Ordeal," she answered simply and frankly, her unsophisticated little heart not realizing what a momentous confession her words were to Larry. "He has not returned and it is whispered among the prisoners, especially by one-eyed Youssouh el-Bachir, that this one's bones are bleaching in the light of the Eye."

"And why should you grieve so for one of your own sex?"

It was Tribe Two who questioned.

Tribe Six turned and found his place on the cushions. Larry, his heart tripping rapidly, awaited Benna's reply, and he was cursing silently, but heartily, Omar ben Medjad for being a fool to ask such a leading question of Benna—a question that might easily arouse the suspicions of Tribe Six. Now he heard the girl speak again, her voice the epitome of hopeless despair, its bell-like quality sounding dead and desolate.

"Because he was my companion on the Forbidden Road, because he fought for me and would have died for me, even as I would have gone to Moulay Edriss to save him."

Now another amazing thing happened for Tribe Two chuckled audibly and called out brazenly to Tribe Six:

"There is a friend for you, Emir Barrada."

The effect of Omar's words on Tribe Six was instantaneous. The man leaped to his feet with a hearty Moorish oath—most amazing for a holy man—and from beneath his scarlet robe he drew a long, curved knife. But Omar's steady chuckle came again and once more he called out:

"Be not violent, Emir. I see that you also, have made your way here, even as you vowed to me that you would if I gave you life. It is well, by Allah, it is. We are now four friends, well met, Emir, the Marabout of Adrar yonder, or Tribe One, is the friend for whom the youth Allal Abdi mourns. Youssef el-Habassi, speak in your natural voice, that Allal's heart be not entirely broken."

"But—" Larry began.

"What?" from Tribe Six.

"Youssef, Tribe Six is one of my most trusted khalifas, and he is with us heart and soul. Emir, Tribe One is the wizard. Not his bones, but those of the man who took the real marabout's place bleach in the fire chamber."

Larry's single word had revealed him to Benna and now, overcome with the reaction, she dropped on the cushions, her shoulders shaking while convulsive sobs racked her slender, worn body.

Omar ben Medjad took quick command of the situation.

"Hurry, Emir, watch the eastern portal, while I watch the entrance from the Eye. There are no others we need fear. It runs in my mind that the youth Allal Abdi is in need of consolation, and my heart tells me that Youssef el-Habassi is the one to extend it."

Now Emir Barranda was a man of understanding and a quick thinker. He did not know exactly what it was all about, but he did know that Omar ben Medjad wanted him to make himself scarce, so as Tribe Two arose and hurried off behind the long draperies, Tribe Six took another direction, and also disappeared. But before either of them was out of sight Larry, stripping back his hooded mask, was at Benna's side, lifting her to him, pouring out soft, endearing words that fell on her shell-like ears as softly as the morning dawn breaks over the mighty Atlas.

She twisted her little body so that she lay in his arms, her deep, glorious eyes at first unable to comprehend this miracle that had been wrought, then as the reality of it all finally reached into her tired, reeling brain, she clasped Larry convulsively about the neck with bare, slender arms which showed the marks of her recent heavy toil, and dropped her head against his breast. For a space neither thought of time; their world was encompassed by his arms holding her close and by her arms which clasped him tightly to her; for them there was no time.

CHAPTER FORTY-SEVEN

"They return with the Eye, Grenfall."

Larry came back to earth as though from a far journey heavenwards. He heard Omar ben Medjad's urgent voice again.

"Quickly, else we are ruined."

With a hurried motion Larry released Benna and drew his hooded mask down over his face when Tribes Three and Four came up. Benna was sitting a little to one side now and, her little Berber heart overflowing with joy, was hard put to hide her tumultuous feelings, yet so consummate a natural actress was she that anyone who saw here now would have sworn that she was a living symbol of despair, living symbol of despair.

Larry heard Tribe Six speak to Tribe Two:

"But, Omar, by Allah's beard, the youth Allal Abid must in reality be a woman."

Whereupon he heard Tribe Two's gruff response:

"Of course, fool; would he be apt to kiss a man?"

Now from behind the draperies came Tribes Three, Four and Five. Tribe Seven was still absent on his mission with Youcouh el-Bachir, who, if Omar ben Medjad knew what he was talking about, was really the Marabout of Adrar, arch conspirator of the Marabout Group, and directing power behind the group's deviltry. Those who came now bore a casket. Pure gold and ivory, it seemed in the light of the crimson torches, and there were exquisite carvings on the lid and on the sides. It was perhaps, ten inches square, being also about three inches deep. Sealed, there was no indication that it had been opened in a score of years—aye, in even a hundred years.

It is a curious fact that great crises usually come quietly, without show of alarm or rattle of conflict. As the Sacred Eye came to him Larry visioned grimly that here was the last way in the world he had expected he would receive it. He had come prepared to battle to the death to steal it from the marabouts, yet, true to life it was being literally handed to him with free hands and free hearts. It is thus that the really great things of history have transpired—the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown, made without any show save bravely drawn up soldiers; the capitulation of Lee under the apple tree.

Those bearing the box walked directly to Larry and Tribe Five, who acted as spokesman, directed that it be placed on the American's knees, saying:

"There is the Eye, Tribe One. We go at once to prepare for the dawn and the mouloud. The tower over the Gate of the Daggers must be made ready for the display. Already the armed hosts are drawn up before the gate, sleeping on their arms, awaiting with burning hearts and eager anticipation the showing of the Eye. We shall see you, at dawn."

"At dawn," Larry repeated, gravely, and watched silently as the trio filed off. Now Tribe's Two and Six arose at a signal from the former.

"That means we must join them and help in the preparations," said Omar. "We shall, at first opportunity, rejoin our comrades beyond the walls." He leaned over and spoke in a guarded voice to Larry:

"Guard the Eye sacredly. It may be that when next you see me I shall again be the Sheikh Tahar el-Hassun. I would be it my right arm, by Allah, I would, if the Eye were in Ab Dukkar at this moment."

Larry's fingers were running along the box, pressing the little carvings and tiny knobs that stood out all over it. Now he said:

"Wait, Omar. Perhaps the box may be opened. Let your comrade go and give an excuse for you being detained. If I can open this it is in my mind that the Eye may be delivered to Ab Dukkar without the knowledge of any save yourself and I."

His fingers went nimbly across the carvings a second time and each time as they crossed the raised places they pressed sharply. Nothing happened. He wondered if there were a combination of tiny springs here, or if there really were a plume inside. While Omar and Benna watched tensely, he set himself at his task. After a time Omar grew restless, while Benna seemed a living statue beside him. And so an hour passed. Larry's brow was knitted with furrows beneath his mask and in these wrinkles tiny rivulets of cold perspiration were forming.

He knew the Moors were great for secret things; for mysteries and puzzles. It was in his mind that this box opened either by a secret spring or a series of them. He had by now tried almost every combination he could think of. But there remained one more. He turned to Omar:

"There are six knobs more than I can touch at one time. Here, while I press these ten, do you press the other six."

Muttering that he feared it was a waste of time, Omar bent as directed—and the lid of the box clicked and came away in Larry's hands!

Inside lay a golden disken, with a single, giant jewel, a ruddy ruby, flashing from a center at the front. Whether it actually had a hammer part, as legend said, Larry doubted, but that it held an unseen power over all Moslems he knew. At a flash, literally he lifted the jeweled thing above the box and without even taking time to examine it, turned it on the instant to Omar ben Medjad.

"Hurry," he said, "my comrade is dying. I have withdrawn from your hands the Sacred Eye. I have done it, and remember the moulouds shall rest in peace for the remainder of time. Quick, for Allah's sake, I have seen one of these fits [illegible]

Love's Embers

A Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

BY ADELE GARRISON

PHILIP'S SUDDEN INTEREST

I AM afraid that I eyed Philip Veritzen with really feline watchfulness as I told him and Lillian that I was sure the new tenants of "The Larches" were all Transvanians. I remembered his son Noel's naive revelation that his father belonged to that romantic and faraway country which only recently had been brought into unusual prominence by the visit to the United States of its royal family. I knew also, and wondered if Lillian shared by knowledge, of Mr. Veritzen's inordinate interest in the doing of that family and the entertainments given them, even breaking over his invariable attitude of lofty indifference to all social functions and deliberately pulling wires to gain invitations to the few entertainments given the royal guests to which he was not already bidden.

Would Mr. Veritzen be as frank as his son, or would he still keep the secret of his origin, which no one of his associates knew, and which I was sure his son would not have revealed except to us at the farmhouse of whose discretion he was assured?

But whatever effect the name of his native land thus coming surprisingly from my lips may have had upon him, he lost no whit of his poise as he leaned toward me and said with just the conventional intonation of surprise.

"Transvanians? Are you sure? That is most interesting if your surmise is correct. There are very few of them in this country. There were hardly enough to provide a suitable reception for the royal family."

"Yet there were enough of them to stage a picturesque exhibition of prayer for Olina when she fell so ill just before their departure," Lillian commented, and I nodded an assent. Most vividly I remembered the accounts of the sorrow in the little Transvanian colony when they learned that the Princess Olina eldest daughter of the king and queen had been stricken with a very serious illness just before the time scheduled for the departure of the royal family. The papers had been filled with the descriptions of the suite fitted up as a small but fully equipped private hospital aboard the ship and of the corps of physicians and nurses which accompanied the stretcher carrying the swathed figure of the young princess aboard ship. The transplanted Transvanians in New York had filled their tiny church to overflowing as they dispatched up prayers for the recovery of their stricken princess.

"Yes, that is true," Mr. Veritzen asserted, then added cynically: "Their petitions evidently didn't do much good. I understand that Olina has not yet fully recovered from that attack. She had to be transferred by stretchers and ambulances from ship to train and again to her father's palace. But I believe she is recovering now at one of the royal country estates."

Lillian's face expressed something near impatience at his lengthy answer as her poise and good-breeding permitted. And when she had finished, she promptly seized the reins of conversation.

"Poor thing!" she commented. I cannot imagine anything more deadly than to be a convalescent at a royal country estate. I'd as soon be in a home for the aged and indigent. But tell me, Madge, what makes you think those new tenants of 'The Larches' are Transvanians? Didn't you say the young mistress of the place denied it?"

"Yes, but most unconvincingly," I returned, and Philip Veritzen leaned forward with a suggestion.

"Why don't you begin at the beginning," he asked, "and tell us all about these new neighbors of yours? Mrs. Underwood is going to have a stroke or something if you don't, and then our outing will be spoiled."

Lillian made a saucy grimace at him.

"Oh, I'll admit that I'm suffering a severe attack of the malady which killed the well-known cat," she said. "The only difference between you and me, Phil, is that I do admit it."

Recipes for New and Novel Dishes; Household Ideas and Suggestions

Pancakes or griddle cakes taste as good in summer as in the winter, although it is better to make the light, fluffy variety rather than the more solid. Sour milk cakes and rice cakes are both good at this time of the year. Sour milk may be used in the rice griddle cake recipe in place of sweet, by adding soda.

TODAY'S RECIPES

Summer Pancakes—Two cups sour milk, two eggs, one teaspoon soda, flour enough to make a batter, about two cups. The use of an aluminum griddle will eliminate the smoke caused by cooking them with fat and they will be more digestible.

Rice Griddle Cakes—Three-fourths cup cold boiled rice, soaked in one cup milk or water overnight. Two cups milk added in the morning, two cups flour, a well-beaten egg, one-half teaspoon soda dissolved in a little hot water, one half teaspoon salt. Bake on griddle.

Syrup—One cup brown sugar, two-thirds cup granulated sugar, one cup water. Cook until it threads, then use.

WASH THEM FIRST

Figs and dates should always be thoroughly cleansed before using. Placing them in colander and pouring boiling water over them will remove the germs and dirt and do no harm to the dates.

A LITTLE OVER

When buying carpet for stairs it is wise to buy one yard more than is actually needed. Then when the carpet shows signs of wear it can be pieced so that the worn part will come below each step and the good part on top.

St. Mary's Catholic Church History Dates Back Nearly Three Quarters of Century

Present Edifice Has Served Community Since 1894; Marion Mission Grew Out of Community Gatherings in Homes in and Around City

Devoutly and quietly religious activities of the St. Mary's Catholic Church in Marion have gone on for nearly three quarters of a century, during which time definite and continued progress has been made.

St. Mary's Church and the priest's home are located on N. Main-st, and the school, a $40,000 structure erected during the pastorate of the Rev. J. M. Denning, stands in the same city block.

Approximately all the historic facts relative to the foundation and growth of the Catholic Church procurable are contained in an issue of the Marion Daily Mirror, Saturday, Oct. 13, 1894, a souvenir edition printed to celebrate the dedication of the present church. Copy of the Mirror was found in the possession of Joseph Voll, who believes his is one of the very few of the newspapers remaining in Marion.

Yellowed With Age

The paper is yellowed with age and torn. It carries full program and comment of the dedicatory services and history of the church to 1894. Photographs of Archbishop Elder, of Cincinnati, who had charge of the ceremonies for the dedication and laying of the cornerstone for the church, the Rev. James A. Burns pastor, and his assistant James Malloy; Dean Sidley, of Springfield; the architect, John R. Vermont; the building committee, T. J. Ryan, John M. Cleary, J. H. Dwyer, H. A Schuyler, and J. W. Mackin, and Contractor A. W. Sherrer, all, appear in the issue.

According to the facts related in the newspaper, history of St. Mary's Church dates beyond the early fifties. Catholics in the neighborhood of Marion and in the town gathered frequently to worship and their spiritual wants were attended to by the Rev. Father Burgess, of Detroit, who came at irregular intervals to Marion from Columbus his temporary home.

First Catholic Mission

Out of the group meetings, in the early fifties, the Mirror states, grew the Marion Mission. The Mission was supervised by pastors from Delaware, Bellefontaine and Kenton. First regular priests, so the old newspaper relates, included Fathers Coppinger, McSweeney, Coveney, Mackay, McMahon O'Donohue, Quatman, Carey, Mageei, and Burns, the latter of whom was pastor during the erection of the present church and who was largely responsible for its building.

West Street Church

Through the efforts of Father Coveney, pastor in the year 1861, the first church was built, and was dedicated by Bishop Rosecrans, of Columbus, in 1862. Growth of the congregation and religious activities of the church made the West Street Church inadequate in space, and by the year 1894 it was necessary to plan a new place of worship.

New Church

Excavation for the present building was begun in 1891. The church committee at that time consisted of Timothy Kelly, Michael Cleary, A. C. Edmondson, John H. Dwyer, Ed Malloy, and Cornelius Breen. Cost of the structure was estimated at $30,000.

Father Burns served as pastor of St. Mary's Church until 1897 when Father Michael Mulvihill came to Marion. His pastorate continued through April, 1900. He was succeeded by Father J. M. Denning, who stayed on until March 8, 1922, administering to the church and its people in a manner that made him beloved by all and brought growth, expansion and prosperity to the church.

It was during the years that Father Denning served in Marion that the school was erected on the church lot.

Father McNairy served temporarily in Marion and was known as "Overseas McNairy" among the parishioners.

Father Denning was succeeded in 1922 by the Rev. F. X. Cotter who has fallen into the footsteps of his predecessor in a capable manner, which has endeared him to the congregation.

The Christian Church

A SERMONETTE
BY REV. G. A. KANZLER
Pastor Salem Evangelical Church.

WHY do we speak of the Christian Church as being one church?

The Christian church is called the one church because it has one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, as it is written in Ephesians 4:3-6: "Endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace. There is one body and one spirit, even as ye are called in one hope, of your calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all and in you all."

This is true of every church, and is the confession of every type of christian in the universally accepted Apostle's creed. Besides this, every church sings that beautiful hymn, "Onward Christian Soldiers," in which the third stanza reads, "We are not divided, all one body we, one in hope and doctrine, one in charity."

Why then all the complaint about a supposed schism in the church of Jesus Christ today? Is our hymnology better than our theology, and our creed more biblical than our personal religion is creditable?

Again and by illustration, because red is not green, one would not dare say that "red" is not color. Red, green, white, black, etc., are merely different shades of colors. Precisely so in the church, the varieties of denominations are merely types of the christian character. Modes of religious expression and frequently the degree of church zeal are brought to a fuller view by the denominational name. But to the thoughtful person denominational variety cannot be a cause for division in the church but always cause for complaint to the church, for her grand capacity to adapt herself to all people, in all countries of all the world. Yes, the church is one church. Are you with her?

MILTON LASHEY TO PREACH HERE

Milton Lashey, colored Christian worker of this city, will deliver the sermon at the night services of the Park-st M. E. Church, Sunday night.

STRONG TEAMS ARE BOOKED FOR WEEK-END BILL

Toledo Police and Colored Giants To Oppose Kenton Reds

Kenton, July 2 — With the Toledo Police team booked for Sunday and the Columbus Colored Giants on July Fourth, the Kenton Reds ball club is facing its stiffest two days game schedule this season.

Profiting by the poor showing made by the Reds in their first two defeats of the year, the only two they have suffered out of nine games, Manager Bert McFarland has built up one of the strongest clubs in the history of the city.

Class of the locals was established Tuesday when they handed the All Nations a real drubbing here. In his determination to win Sunday's tilt, McFarland has secured the services of Ray Ferner, Columbus, to do the hurling, and Bud Leis of the Springfield Eagles to play at shortstop.

Joe White, veteran Red player, will be absent from centerfield in the week end games, for the first time in many seasons, as a result of a sprained right ankle received Tuesday. However McFarland will be able to fill the position from among his reserves.

Having won 15 of their 18 games played this season, the Colored Giants, classed as the strongest all-negro club in the state, promises to provide the Reds with their stiffest opposition over the week-end. If present plans are carried out, Norby Hathcock, crack colored twirler who has hurled the Reds to victory in several straight games, will oppose the Capital City colored lads from the mound.

Manager McFarland is making arrangements to take care of a record crowd for the holiday contest.

MRS. FITCHORN HONORED BY GIRL SCOUT GROUP

Mt. Gilead Group To Attend Camp Mitchell, Near Columbus

Mt Gilead, July 2—The Girl Scouts, under the supervision of Mrs. K. H. Metleorge, gave a surprise picnic supper at the playground last night in honor of Mrs. E. J Fitchorn. The party was given to express their appreciation of Mrs. Fitchorn's cooperation in their efforts to secure uniforms. She gave a market netting them $30 and made candy which they sold, clearing $50. Twenty girls are now in uniforms and the rest will be similarly equipped soon.

The Girl Scouts originated here when 10 girls asked Miss Pauline Gabriel, then playground director, to help them plan a summer camp about one year ago. She agreed and, though no camp resulted, the troop was organized. When Miss Gabriel's term expired, no one took up the work until Mrs. McGeorge came here. She took charge of the troop and increased its membership until now they have 32 Girl Scouts, who have all passed their tenderfoot examination. Many are well on their way to the higher classes.

This year the girls will realize the hope on which they organized, that of having a camp. The girls have planned to attend Camp Mitchell, 18 miles east of Columbus, where they will spend a short vacation and study for their examinations. Many who go as tenderfoots will return as second and first class girl scouts.

Mrs. McGeorge is well pleased with the manner in which the girls have responded. She stated that at least 20 of the 32 attend every meeting. Their program includes hikes, picnics, and parties. Mr. McGeorge is directly connected with the Boy Scout troop here and is recognized as a very proficient scoutmaster.

Marysville, July 2—The case of Mrs. Bertha B. Graham against Charles Spurgeon was brought to a close Friday when Common Pleas Judge E. W. Porter refused to grant Mrs. Graham a permanent injunction against Spurgeon to restrain the latter from erecting a church building on his lot in N. Main-st, to be rented and later sold to the Union Gospel Mission of Marysville.

The case attracted a lot of attention in this city and called many witnesses into court. Plaintiff's witnesses were John L. Sellers, Dr. Angus MacIver, C. C. Jarvis, Frank Collier, C. O. Cedor, all of whom own property near the site of the proposed building. They claimed that the building of the church would cause a depreciation in property values in the neighborhood.

Former Kenton Man Expresses Optimism In Interview on China's Future Outlook

Kenton, July 2—Carl T. Schofield, who is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Schofield, of this city after six years spent in Y. M. C. A. work in northwestern China, expressed optimism in an interview today over the future outlook for China.

He recently landed in America with his wife and baby, having escaped all dangers from the fighting and turmoil in the orient. While Mr. Schofield went to New York to make arrangements for entering the school of teaching at Columbia University in the fall, his wife remained in the West. She will join her husband here within a few days.

Concerning the Chinese situation he said "The Nationalist group is at present attempting to establish a government similar to that of the United States and controls southern and central China."

Favor Policy

Although this group is against the foreign concession, Mr. Schofield said, they are for the most part willing to get together on the subject. The Nationalist group is split into two factions. The moderate party, in the majority, favors the above mentioned policy while the radical or "Red" group advocates force to obtain hold on the concessions.

The three ideals and objectives of the Nationalists, he continued, are: improvement of conditions of workers, establishment of a democratic, national government and the establishment of China on an equality basis in the family of nations of the world.

Many of their slogans and ideals come from America. That one chief slogan is "government by and for the people" adapted after a study of the United States government.

Most of the trouble at the present time, he said, comes from the "Red" section of the party which is directed by communists from Russia. The group controls two provinces and is urging mob violence against foreigners.

Eagles In Tie For League Lead; Stars Beat Kappas; Kiwanis Nose Out Dairies

Four-Way Tie Again Exists in Commercial League as Kappas, Stars, Kiwanis and K. of P. Appear in Second-Place Deadlock

SCORING the winning run in the last frame when Kiehm crossed the plate with the counter that broke the 4 to 4 deadlock the K. of P. outfit last night pulled another of the many surprises common to the Commercial League when it nosed out the Steam Shovel Office, 5 to 4.

As the result of that victory and the Marion Stars' seventh-inning win over the Kappa Alpha Phis, the Commercial League is again in an uproar with two teams tied for first place and four in a deadlock for second position.

The Eagles swamped the Postoffice, 19 to 2, for their sixth win and a tie for the league lead while Kiwanis remained in a tie for second by trimming Isaly Dairies, 4 to 3.

Smallwood On Mound

Smallwood pitched the K. of P.'s to a victory over the Shovels with Bush performing on the mound for the loser. Each team collected eight hits but an error on the part of the Shovels in the seventh inning placed the winning run on the sacks for the Pythians.

The K. of P.'s scored one in the first frame and counted three more in the fifth inning when the Shovels had a lead of three runs. With the score tied at four all, an error and a couple of hits ruined the hopes of the Steam Shovels.

Stars Rally

With the score standing 6 to 3 against them, the Stars came to bat in the last of the seventh and went on a rampage. When it was all over, the count stood 7 to 6 in their favor.

With one out, McClintock reached first on an error by Johnston, and scored when Chenoweth smacked out a two-bagger. Chenoweth followed him around the sacks when the Kappas began throwing wild in the infield. Cahill singled and scored on Watson's triple and Watson crossed the plate with the winning run when Hiett knocked out a long fly to centerfield.

Kerr pitched for the Stars for five innings and was relieved by Gibson. Rank went the trip on the mound for the Kappas. The Stars received only eight hits while the Kappas made 14 but three of the eight for the Stars came in the last inning. Gibson allowed only one hit in the last two innings.

Four-Way Tie

As a result of the victory, the Stars stepped into a second place tie with the Kappas and were followed by the winning K. of P.'s and Kiwanis, who also have won four and lost four so far this season.

Another last inning rally resulted in a win for the Kiwanis over the Dairies. The score was 4 to 3. The Dairies made one run in the seventh and were on their way to the winning counter but Vanderhoff died on third as the last out was made. Zuspan pitched for Isalies and Hane did the mound work for the winners.

Gruber pitched for the Eagles as they trimmed the Postoffice 19 to 2. The game was one mass of errors and hits, the errors being recorded for the Postoffice and the hits going to the Eagles. Lingo pitched for the losers. It was their seventh defeat.

HELEN WILLS WINS FINALS

WINS WIMBLEDON TITLE

Helen Wills, queen of American tennis, today was crowned queen of the world in women's singles amateur tennis, when she won the English lawn tennis tournament at Wimbledon. She defeated Senorita De Alvarez, 6-2, 6-4, in the finals.

BEATS SPANISH STAR; BECOMES AMATEUR CHAMP

Succeeds to Position Vacated by Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen

WIMBLEDON, July 2—Miss Helen Wills of California today won the English lawn tennis championship and premier world position in women's singles amateur tennis by defeating the Spanish star, Senorita De Alvarez in the finals play of the Wimbledon tournament.

The score was 6-2, 6-4.

By her crushing defeat of the Spanish senorita, Miss Wills succeeds to the position in amateur tennis vacated by Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen when the French woman abandoned her amateur status to turn professional.

Attracts Many

The match attracted a large and brilliant gallery, both players being extremely popular in England. Interest in the match was second only to what it would have been had England's own flashing star, young Betty Nuthall, won through to the finals.

Helen played in supreme form, and had command of the play almost from the start.

Helen opened the play serving a fast ball which the Spanish girl drove into the net. Helen then proceeded to take that and the two succeeding games easily.

In the sixth game Senorita De Alvarez caught the ball on an early bound at shoulder height and made her first score against the American. Helen then drove into the net. Senorita Alvarez took the game.

Service Takes Fifth

Helen's beautiful service took the fifth. The sixth was a furious battle. The Spanish girl carried the score to 40-15, then Helen brought it to deuce. But Alvarez would not be denied. Using a glorious counter-drive, she took the game.

Helen, as if patiently abiding her time, calmly annexed the seventh and eighth games, to win the set.

The eighth was a game that showed the principals as super stars. Helen using her fine backhand mercilessly while the Spaniard uncovered extraordinary agility in racing from line to line for the American's shots. She finally cracked under the pace and Helen stroked her way to the game points.

Then calmly and coolly, she pressed home her advantage with careful, well timed drives to take the next two games the set and the match.

It was unanimously voted one of the finest exhibitions of women's tennis ever seen at Wimbledon. It also was a match of fine sportsmanship. Senorita Alvarez offering the courtliest of congratulations to a blushing and modest winner and confessing that the pace of the terrific and extended rallies had been too much for her.

The second set developed one of the

Toledo Old's Motors To Meet Athletics Sunday and Monday; Bincos Will Play

Athletics Out for Revenge; Toledo Team One of Two To Defeat Locals So Far This Season; Bincos Will Play Somerville Sunday

THREE baseball games are scheduled for Lincoln Park over the week-end and Fourth of July. A double-header, featuring the Bincos against Somerville and the Athletics against Toledo Old's Motors will be played Sunday with a second game between the Athletics and Toledo outfit comes on the Fourth.

All three games are expected to attract huge crowds. The Bincos' game will start at 12:30 Sunday afternoon, while the Athletics contest will be called at 2:30 on each day.

The home run king comes with the Toledo team. McClain, third baseman for Old's Motors socked three of them over the fence during his last appearance here. He's been knocking 'em a mile ever since while the Toledo pitchers have not been scored against since the game with Marion here a few weeks ago.

The Marion lineup Sunday will find everyone in his usual place with Main and Brashears doing the battery work. Reese will probably pitch Monday, although no definite statement to that effect has yet been made.

Marion has lost only two games this season and one of them went to the Toledo team by a score of 10 to 6. The Old's Motors are said to be the old Elmore nine but in their last performance on the local diamond we failed to see very many Elmore players on the field. They were all new and all better.

The Athletics will dig into the games over the week-end seeking revenge for the defeat suffered earlier in the season.

GEHRIG LEADING RUTH IN HOMERS

New York, July 2—Babe Ruth, the greatest home run hitter of all time, is trailing Lou Gehrig, his youthful team mate, in the home run marathon today. Gehrig hit his 26th circuit clout yesterday and is one homer ahead of the Bambino.

Gehrig has dented the bleachers twelve times since the middle of June. He and Ruth together already has walloped more homers than a whole team ordinarily gets all season.

Both sluggers are behind Ruth's 1921 record when he hit 59 for the season. The entire Yankee club has made 76 homers to date this season and hopes to break its own league record of 134 homers for a season and possibly the National mark of 140, made by Chicago in 1884.

"Buster" is 11 years younger than "Babe."

QUALIFYING ROUNDS OF GOLF MEET OPEN

Will Continue Until Tuesday, When Match Play Starts

Qualifying rounds for the President's Cup handicap golf tournament got under way on the Marion Country Club course today, to continue over the Fourth when match play will be started.

A large number of entries were expected to take part in the meet, the second of the season on the local links. J. J. Hane won the first handicap tourney.

The next inter-club match is scheduled with Findlay at Findlay on July 17.

LA RUE INDIANS WILL PLAY AGOSTA MONDAY

The LaRue Indians will play the Agosta baseball team on the latter's diamond July 4.

All Records for Sale of Davis Cup Tickets Broken

BY DAVIS J. WALSH

NEW YORK, July 2—All records for advance sale of Davis Cup challenge round tickets have been broken two months before the event in question, the United States Lawn Tennis Association announced today with pardonable pride, evidently imbued with the notion that this circumstance is a subtle tribute both to itself and the sport it governs. The tennis association is mistaken—possibly from force of habit.

It is about to sell itself short of tickets because the American public senses the fact the Davis Cup seems due to go on a long journey and morbid, as always, wants to be in at the death.

The recent defeat of William T. Tilden at Wimbledon, following so closely upon the heels of his failure to stop Rene Lacoste at St. Cloud, has left few illusions concerning America's likelihood of retaining the international trophy that has been held in custody here since 1920. The All-French final round today and the All-French finals of the Forest Hills affair last year also constitute talismen of truth along the highway of the immediate future.

The writer doesn't say that France cannot lose the Davis cup play off; merely that France shouldn't.

French Team

For there isn't the slightest doubt that the French team of Lacoste, Borotra, Cochet and Brugnon is to 1927 tennis what the Doherttys were to 1903, Brookes and Wilding were to 1914 and Tilden and Johnston to 1920-25. The French, of course, run fourth in an all-time rating of that kind but we deal only with the present and there they run first in all-around strength. French tennis has reached the crest simultaneously with a gradual sinking of the American game well down into the trough.

Tilden and Johnston, in fact, have been American tennis for upward of nine years, the most successful in our history. Both obviously are not the men they were. Tilden lost his singles title in 1926 for the first time in seven years. Johnston was eliminated in the same tournament rather early in the game. Vincent Richards, the only American to reach the semi-final round against the French, has turned professional. Dick Williams, fourth member of the team, is passed except for doubles play, in which he doesn't team well with Tilden, anyhow.

Francis T. Hunter in fact, was sent abroad with Tilden largely with the idea of developing the pair as doubles partners for Davis Cup competition, which is a tip off on Johnston's stamina. The coast whippet now can be used only in the singles, provided the idea is to get a maximum of results from his game. In addition, there is a corps of young material available but probably not wanted. The tennis association, I understand, is committed to a veteran defense of the cup.

COON CHASE, BALL GAME ON FOURTH

The Fourth of July athletic program in Marion includes a baseball game between Marion Athletics and Toledo Old's Motors at Lincoln Park and a coon chase at Marion County Fair grounds.

The coon chase is scheduled to start at 10 o'clock Monday morning. More than 200 dogs from Ohio and various surrounding states and 100 black coons will be on hand for the races and chase.

No recreational ball games are scheduled for Monday night.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventures

BY JUDD MORTIMER LEWIS

SATURDAYS are like all the rest of the days when it is vacation, only the next day after Saturday is Sunday and then a fella has to have his face and neck and ears washed by an ant, and that isn't so funny.

When I had let Jubilee down by the rope in his teeth and had got my britches on and had went down and milked and strained and was feedin, my face my mother brang in a big platter of pancakes and they all stabbed them with their forks so that I only got one out of the first batch, and they were all buttering theirs and putting syrup on them and bacon between them, and they all got theirs fixed before I got the syrup, and I was poring the syrup on mine when I heard my father give a snort and I looked up and he was looking funny, and then my aut took a mouthful and gave a strangled yell and rushed out of the room, and then my uncle and my grandfather took some and began to fuss, and I looked at my father and he was looking at me funny, and hard that I didn't dast ask what was the matter, so I rolled my pancake over and over in the syrup to get all I could on it, and then I rolled it up into a wad and pushed it in my face, and then I almost choked, and my father stopped looking at me so mean. It wasn't syrup at all it was automobile oil. And I didn't know where to put the mouthful I had got, and we all got up and went out through the kitchen to the back steps, and then we all ranched out mouths out; and my mother who had been frying pancakes hadn't got any of it, and she kept asking what was the matter with us all, and then my father told her if he was mean he would let her find out, but he said someone had filled the syrup pitcher with train oil and he was going to try and find out who done it, and then he asted me who I thought done it, and I told him about Mr. Farrel putting oil in his flivver, and how Younins had said it looked like syrup, and then how I saw the Lost Bag of Tripe coming out of the pantry, and then my father and all of us went in the pantry, and he found a empty bottle down back of the flour barrel, and it had had oil in it, and he looked out of the window and there was a lot of ants and flies around something on the ground, so the sfrup must have been pored out there. And my father put his arm around me and said he was sorry he let me get my mouthful of it, but he wanted to be sure I hadn't done it, because he would of skun me if he had thought I had. And he gave me a nickel.

My father give a snort

I tried to catch the Lost Bag of Tripe all day, but didn't make it. The bunch wouldn't help. They thought it was a good joke. It was.

Peter's Adventures

A Story for Boys and Girls

BY FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

Hidden in the Mud

HERE was something Peter hadn't bargained for. What a shame! The boy had jumped up to tell the singer how much he liked his song, hoping to make friends with the round-faced gentleman in brown, and all he had done was to scare the fellow off to the center of the pond, to strike the water with his tail in loud, resounding blows that must be heard a mile.

And not only the singer himself, but every one of his sisters and his brothers and his uncles and his aunts would always believe that he, Peter, was an enemy and dive to the depths every time they set eyes upon him. He would never become acquainted with the singer or any of the singer's family if he couldn't think of some way to bring the fellow back to shore. What could he do?

Just at this second Peter's eye caught sight of something glistening in the water not far from where he was standing. He bent over to examine it more carefully. It was a chain. One end of it was fastened to a heavy stone just covered by the water and the other end was out of sight, but Peter didn't need to see to guess what was hiding down there in the mud. It was a trap, and unless he was very much mistaken it had been planted to catch the round-faced gentleman in brown.

"Hi there, stranger! Come over and see what I've found," cried the Boy. "Stop whacking with your tail a moment and listen to me. Danger is near you! Watch your stroke when you come near the shore!"

"Goodness, gracious me!" gasped the gentleman in brown. "Here I have been raising the pond, and, after all that Two-Legs is no enemy at all, but a friend!"

Without any hesitation the gentleman in brown paddled back to the shore just as fast as he had scuttled away from it at the first sight of the boy, and he had almost reached the spot where Peter stood when the boy gave a warning yell.

"Quick, turn to your right!" cried Peter. "Make a sharp swerve and come straight inshore. Ah! Now you are all right, thank goodness!"

The gentleman in brown scrambled up the bank and stood before the boy, the water running in streams from off his furry coat.

"I was a fool to run away!" the gentleman in brown admitted. "I might have known you had not come to the pond for any evil purpose. No Two-Legs as small as you could ever do a Four-Foot harm." He reached out a front paw toward the Boy. "Shake, will you, and be friends? Good! Now what in the name of the Builder of Dams have you found?"

"A trap, and—"

But the fellow interrupted Peter with a hoarse cry.

"A trap!" yelped he. "A trap! Then indeed am I in danger, and not only I, but all the Beavers that live in this pond. Where is it? Oh, I see! No wonder you told me to turn to the right. In another stroke, the way I was going, I would have run right into it. What shall I do? Say, you couldn't pull the thing out on dry land, could you?"

MOTORS AND INDUSTRIALS LEAD MODERATE ADVANCE

Holiday Conditions Pronounced on Wall Street, Many Traders Absent

MARKETS AT A GLANCE
Railroad stocks quiet and steady. Industrial stocks firm with motor stocks active. Domestic bonds steady. Foreign bonds steady. Grain irregular. Copper steady. Oil firmer. Cotton quiet and firm. Rubber steady. Sugar firm. Foreign exchange irregular.

New York, July 2—Stocks of the motor and industrial companies were the leaders in a moderate advance in stock prices in the half session of the market today.
Holiday conditions were more pronounced than in the last day or two, due to the exit of most of the large traders from Wall Street for the double holiday. Professional evenings up of speculative accounts constituted the chief business of the day, and the pools were inclined to mark time in their activities with speculative favorites.
Mixed trends in important lines of trade and business were reported by the week-end business reviews. On the whole, the results of the first half year have been favorable though considerable disappointment has been expressed over the recent sharp decline in forward orders in the steel and other important trades as well as the uncertain outlook in other departments of business. Unseasonable weather has been a great handicap to general progress in important branches of American industry.
Hudson and Chrysler led the advance in the low-priced motor shares, while American can was the standard bearer for the industrials.
Chrysler's 2 point advance brought the stock up to 47 5-8 in a fairly active movement, while Hudson rallied to above 81. American Can sold around 56 and General Motors was in good demand at 198, and higher. Mack Trucks, Texas Gulf Sulphur and the sugar stocks were firm.

COTTON

New York, July 2—Cotton opened higher today, up two to seven points. July opened at 16.92, up 07, October 17.14, up 03 and December 17.34, up 02.

TO HOLD FESTIVAL

Green Camp, July 2—The Green Camp Epworth League has announced that it will hold a festival on the lawn near the bandstand here, next Wednesday night. A feature of the program will be music furnished by the Gist Orchestra of Prospect.

It was the second win of the week for the Butler team. It defeated Galion Thursday night on the Galion diamond. Next Thursday the local outfit will meet Galion on a Marion diamond and will clash with Crestline Friday night here.

HERE'S MORE ABOUT

greatest duels of Helen's career, a career in which she won three successive American titles, the Olympic championship and now the Wimbledon all-comers. Only a victory over Sumnne was denied her and even there the latter's lone decision was by no means conclusive.
On their form in the second set, either Miss Wills or Senorita Alvarez would have forced Mlle. Lenglen to display her greatest court sorcery in order to survive.
Playing dazzling tennis, Helen took the first two games in rapid succession, the gallery fairly gasping at the skill and speed of her shots. Then it was the Spaniard's turn. She rushed the nets for a series of really amazing half-volleys and took the third and fourth games.

Helen Takes Fifth

Helen bore down with her admirable service at the fifth and took the game but the Senorita retaliated in the sixth with lightning, cross-court drives to which Helen could find no adequate reply. This made the score in games 3 all.
The seventh developed a heartbreaking battle over Helen's service. The Californian was volleyed in a position where she trailed at 15-40, but she rallied brilliantly to smash the base lines and bring the score to deuce. But the senorita ultimately took the game and the lead at 4-3 with two beautiful passing shots as Helen stormed the net.

Behind the Screen

Estelle Taylor.

Estelle Taylor has been chosen by D. W. Griffith to play the title role in his first picture, "La Paiva," since his return as a motion picture director. The story is that of a girl reared in the gutter, who finally becomes a favorite of the emperor.

ANNOUNCEMENT had been made from her studio that Gloria Swanson wished it to be known that in her screen production of "Sadie Thompson," based on the stage play, "Rain," there would be no missionary. Latest reports had it also that Theodore Dreiser's book, "The American Tragedy," finally had been approved for screening, but had to be entirely revised to suit screen production.
But it's all off. Will Hays, dictator of the movies, has banned not only these two plays, but Sidney Howard's Pulitzer prize winner, "They Knew What They Wanted," as well.
Preliminary expenses of approximately $100,000 are lost.
Regardless of censorship, it seems that screening of fine books is an art that proves a disappointment. It seems impossible for the silent drama to impart to the viewers the real thoughts of the author, or to make the characters thinking, living pulsating figures. One must content himself with subtitles, often wholly inadequate to interpret the real trend of the drama.
This was so strikingly illustrated in one of the recent pictures in which a young prince, who, after having been shown in most detailed manner as enjoying for several years debauchery and dissipation in its lowest degree, suddenly in the next reel is possessed of the keenest sense of justice, honor and love for righteous living. Just what led him to reform thus, his thoughts, the agony of remorse, his fine forces of character finally rebelling and in a supreme effort throwing off the stigma imprinted by years of loose living, of that nothing is told.
Yet, when one turns to the book, it is just here where the real master stroke of the author is revealed. He makes the character a breathing, forceful figure who fairly sweeps the reader with him through all the vicissitudes of mental anguish to final resurrection. Just how much of that can a movie show us?

"The Slums of Berlin," imported German picture, has had its showing in New York. It is lauded as one of the finest pictures that has come out of Germany. The picture is based on true incidents in the Teutonic capital and it has been made in the very atmosphere it depicts.

Dr. S. W. Mattox Writes of Tuberculosis Situation Among Children In Europe

Marion Physician Says Figures on Prevalence of Disease Startling Among Infants in Foreign Countries, in Letter to Dr. J. T. Gruber

Startling figures of the prevalence of tuberculosis among the children of some foreign nations due to indifference or lack of knowledge of the importance of tuberculin tested cows and the proper pasteurizing of milk, are contained in a letter received by Dr. J. T. Gruber from Dr. S. W. Mattox, Marion physician, who with several hundred other physicians are taking postgraduate work in the various hospitals in Europe.

Of the situation in Edinburgh Dr. Mattox says "they have a very large amount of bovine tuberculosis here. Approximately 12 per cent of the children have the disease and 90 percent of the glandular troubles are of the bovine type. Children have bovine tuberculosis in their joints, marrow of the bone, bowels, and germs are actually found in the sputum."

Clean Record Law

A law recently passed has done little to correct the situation, Dr. Mattox says. The new law requires that anyone having a tubercular animal in his herd, must dispose of it, but there is nothing in the law to prevent him from selling the cow to a neighbor, which is done.

It is only at colleges that the milk is properly pasteurized, Dr. Mattox says and this is given as one reason for the prevalence of gland trouble among children.

"In northern Norway, where the matter of tuberculin testing of cattle is little known," the physican says, "they gave a report that 68 per cent of the children showed symptoms of tuberculosis at the age of three years. As they grow older, however, the percentage decreases and at 20 it is estimated that 17 per cent still have the disease. Northern Sweden also has a large amount of bovine tuberculosis. The Edinburgh city dairies showed 17 per cent of germs of the tubercular bovine type in all of the milk delivered in the city. Is it any wonder that they have such a large amount of bovine tuberculosis? It certainly would make one shudder to look at it. I made them take the cream out and boil it before using it."

Goes To Sweden

From Stockholm Dr. Mattox drove to Ipsala, Sweden, a city of 30,000 inhabitants with a state medical institution. "This is the oldest college in Sweden," Dr. Mattox writes. "But all medical buildings and equipment are new and up-to-date with not a thing left out. They pasteurize all milk and have very little tuberculosis. They also tuberculin test all dairy cattle."

Dr. Mattox with his party left Sweden on June 19 for Hamburg Germany, one of the five German cities in which the physicians will study. Dr. and Mrs. Mattox expect to visit Rome, Naples, Cairo and Jerusalem before returning home early in August.

TRAFFIC VIOLATIONS ON DECREASE HERE, CLAIM

Reduction Attributed to Street Markings; Many Disregard No Parking Signs

Although greater than the month of May, a marked decrease in the number of traffic violations during the month of June over that of April was shown in a check of violations in municipal court today.

That the decrease from 121 cases in April to 97 in the month of May and 77 in June, is due to the marking of the streets by the police, is proved. Fifty three of those tagged during June were guilty of failing to observe the "No parking" sign while 12 were guilty of improper parking.

A large majority of those tagged during May were also violators of rule No. 4 which provides against improper parking. The increase in the number of violations during June over that of May, is believed by the police to be due to the increase in the number of tourists.

Maximum Non-Skid

The wide, deep grooves running criss-cross fashion give this tire unusually effective non-skid properties. The sharp edges grip the road and the crevices hold tenaciously. The angle at which the grooves are cut into the tire affords these non-skid features without affecting the easy steering properties. This tread design also leaves plenty of rubber where rubber is needed.

The company, a closed corporation, is capitalized at $25,000. Incorporators presenting articles filed in Guilford, Spradling & Guilford attorneys for the company.

The coal concern started here on July 1 A. F. Chapman, it is reported, is to be interested in the company, as it will handle coal, coke and other fuel supplies for both retail and wholesale trade. The intention is to retain and later to develop a retail and wholesale department handling building material and supplies.

In 1905 he was promoted to chief clerk and served in that capacity until Oct. 1 1920 when he established a bureau for efficient handling of less than carload freight shipments. Under his direction a model plan of adjusting claims and tracing cars was established.

He was head of this department until recently when arrangements were made for his becoming associated with the Chapman company.

Mr. Chapman, founder of the business, died 14 years ago and it was then taken over by Mr. Arnold. Under his direction the business has increased in gross sales averaging between $400,000 and $500,000 annually. In a 12-month period during 1917 and 1918 a record was established with business amounting to $800,000.

CRYSTAL LAKE BOARD RETURNS DANCE PERMIT

Officials Send Letter and Grant to Probate Judge L. B. McNeal

The official permit granting the Crystal Pavilion & Amusement Co. authority to conduct public dances on week days was returned to Probate Judge L. B. McNeal yesterday accompanied by a brief explanatory letter signed by C. B. King, president of the company.

The letter explained that as the company had declined to discontinue public dances it was no further use for the permit.

Return of the permit was authorized early this week at a meeting of the board of directors of the company when the Crystal Park pavilion was leased to the newly organized Crystal Dancing Club. The club has announced that it will hold strictly private dances with attendance limited to members.

Maintaining that under the state law a permit is not required for dances on the club grounds, as neither admission or subscription to the club is charged, the club has announced that it will not apply for a permit.

McNeal Disagrees

Judge McNeal, however, is of the opinion that a permit is necessary for a public dance. He stated that a permit was issued for dances on Sundays as well as week days and that the law governing the issuance of permits is prepared by the auditor and not by the county commissioners.

The permit returned by the Crystal Park company yesterday was the one issued by Judge McNeal on June 8 granting permission for dances on Sundays. In granting the permit, which included Sunday dances, Judge McNeal stated that he would not grant permission for dances on Sunday unless the dances were conducted in a strictly orderly manner.

Dances To Be Private

Under terms of the lease granted the Crystal Dancing Club dances on the Crystal Park dance floor will be absolutely private, park officials assert. Membership cards are being issued and must be presented to gain admission to the pavilion. Minors under 18 years of age are admitted to the club only when their applications are endorsed by written consent of parents or guardians.

The first Sunday dance under the new plan is scheduled for tomorrow.
